TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 26.—
John Dillinger, notorious midwestern outlaw, and three members of his notorious gang of escaped Indiana convicts, were in jail here today, their cross-country flight halted when they fell into police traps.

In a whirlwind succession of surprise raids police arrested Charles Makley, 50, "the smooth talker,"
"Rub 'em Out" Russell Clark, 39, and Harry Pierpont, 30, "The Killer." Five hours later Dillinger was trapped.

Three Women Also Taken.
Three women also were taken into custody. One identified herself as Mary Kinter, Pierpont's wife, the other gave her name as Opal Long, and the woman with Dillinger said she was Ann Martin. They were believed to be from Chicago.
Police seized more than $35,000, eight machine guns, ten bullet proof vests, twenty revolvers and thousands of rounds of ammunition.

ever to terrorize the middle west had posed as wealthy easterners and

Under date of January 24 a news release from Harrisburg stated that what was believed to be the largest poison sumac tree in Pennsylvania had been cut down near Fleetwood, Berks county. The tree was ten inches in diameter and this was considered an unusual thing. If this was the record for such trees in Pennsylvania the record was shattered when on Cascade Boul-levard, CWA workmen on the Boul-levard at the old Cascade Ball Park cut down a poison sumac tree 14 inches in diameter and about 22 feet high. Other poison sumacs nearly as large have been cut down but the men thought nothing of it until the Harrisburg story concerning record size came out. The poison sumac does not grow to a large size, seldom exceeding eight inches in diameter and rarely getting to 20 feet in height. The trees on Cascade Boulevard apparently lead the league as far as Pennsylvania is concerned.

Hoover Coming East During Next Month; Politicians Wonder!

By GEORGE R. HOLMES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Word that Herbert Hoover will come east next month percolated through Republican quarters in the capital today and stirred up considerable speculation as to whether the former president is going to attempt to assert his leadership of the divided and rather dormant minority party.

While ostensibly making the trip for personal and private business reasons, inevitably some political significance attaches to his journey because of the party situation.
Republican fortunes have been at low ebb since the smashing defeat of 1932. Reorganization has been talked of spasmodically, but little or nothing has been done about it.
With the important congressional campaign but a matter of a few months distant, the time is now approaching when some party leadership and cohesion is considered absolutely necessary.

Those who have visited Mr. Hoover at his California home assert that he is "out of the picture" for 1936, so far as the presidential nomination is concerned. They say that

Japan Planning To Extend Navy

"Replenishment Program" Is Being Considered By Japanese Now

HEATED DEBATE OVER "CRISIS" TALK

(International News Service)

TOKYO, Jan. 26.—With a watchful eye fixed upon the new naval building plans of the United States, the Japanese navy is planning a "third replenishment program" involving the construction of several vessels outside the provisions of existing treaties, Minister of the Navy Minoe Osumi told a chamber meeting of leading diet members today.
It was understood the navy considered Japan's position will be relatively lowered in comparison with the United States after 1936, and therefore the general staff has drafted its new program.
The navy at "an opportune moment" during 1934 was expected to ask the government for special financial assistance for the ship building plans. At present the anti-mili-tarist faction is bitterly opposed to any further expense for military purposes.

Heated Debate.

(International News Service)
READING, Pa., Jan. 26.—The engineer and fireman of a Reading railroad Harrisburg to New York flyer lay dead in the city morgue here today, victims of a derailment which occurred while they were attempting to make up time lost an hour earlier in a grade crossing crash.

The train crew was scalded to death last night at Brandon, nine miles from here, when the engine, tender and baggage car of the flyer left the tracks as the engineer applied his emergency brakes in a vain effort to avoid striking an automobile stalled on the tracks.

Three of the four passenger coaches were derailed, but none of the passengers was seriously hurt.
The dead were Joseph Sweigart, 65, the engineer, and Charles Bowman, 35, a substitute fireman. Both lived in Harrisburg. They were scalded to death by live steam from broken pipes in the cab of the locomotive.

An hour before the wreck, the same train struck another stalled automobile on a crossing at Kurtz-town, 15 miles from Reading, killing the occupant, Francis F. Seidel, a Reading undertaker.
Traffic over the westbound tracks, 200 yards of which was ripped up by the derailment, was resumed early today after a wrecking crew had been on the scene for six hours.
Sylvester Hess of Reading, driver of the second stalled car, was held in $1,000 bail to await a coroner's verdict.

Believe That Captured Des-

Bremer Abduction

ONE OF GANG TRIES

TUCSON, Ariz., Jan. 26.—
With four members of the notorious Dillinger gang clapped in jail as the result of the smart detective work of what they thought was a "hick town" police force, federal and local authorities moved swiftly today in an effort to connect the desperadoes with the kidnapping of Edward Bremer, rich St.
Paul, Minn., banker.

A tiny scrap of paper which Harry Pierpont, 39, known as the gang's
"rub out" man, attempted to swallow as he was arrested was believed to be the clue that may link the mid-western gangsters with the abduction of Bremer, who is still being held for $200,000 ransom.

Police forced Pierpont to cough up the note. They said he was trying desperately hard to swallow it. The contents of the paper were not revealed, but were said to be of a nature that led police to think that at least the Dillinger gang is acquainted with the Bremer plot.

The most heated debate Japanese leaders have yet engaged in over Japan's foreign and military policy. Despite recent efforts of the government to suppress all talk of the "crisis" which Japan's militarists have envisioned as approaching in 1935, diet members angrily demanded to know whether the "crisis" was real or artificial, and demanded proof.

Bitter interpellations were hurled rapidly at Premier Saito, Minister of War Hayashi and Osumi, all of whom replied ambiguously.

At one point it was charged the navy is ready to ask an additional 200,000,000 yen (about $60,000,000) for building new ships, and this was believed to have referred to the extra funds for the "third replenishment" program.

The reformer had one consolation. Whatever happens, he never runs out of raw material.

DILLINGER AND GANG MEMBERS ARE CAPTURED residences, each of which had been converted into an arsenal.

Walks Into Trap.

Dillinger, bank robber and killer, walked guilelessly into a trap police had set for him five hours after his confederates had been arrested. He and Miss Martin in an expensive automobile drove up for an evening call in front of the residence Clark had rented.

Officers leaped from shrubbery and surrounded them as they walked up the front steps. Expert marksmen were posted nearby.

"Throw 'em up," ordered Police Chief C. E. Wollard, a pioneer southwestern peace officer.

Dillinger laughed easily. "I guess I'm in the wrong place," he said quietly, turned and started to walk toward his automobile.

A police machine gun was pushed into his back.

The woman, a beautiful expensive-looking brunet about 25 years old, screamed.

Dillinger Silent.

Dillinger acted as if to reach for a pistol, but changed his mind. At the police station he and the woman maintained silence.

"Buck up, Dear," he told her "this isn't the end. We've been in tough spots before."

Tucson police were surprised that Dillinger, who engineered the escape of convicts from the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City last September and had shot himself out of several police traps since then, should surrender without firing a shot.

Confronted with fingerprint records, Dillinger admitted his identity. He carried a pistol and $9175 in cash. Police found in his personal baggage two machine guns and more money in bills of large denominations.

Police said the money was believed to have been part of the loot from the $74,000 robbery of a bank at Greencastle, Ind.

They were placed in solitary confinement upon their arrest.

The captures brought to an end a reign of terror that began when Makley, Clark, Pierpont and their companions escaped from the Indiana prison. Their first move, officers said, was the shooting of Sheriff Jess Barber to liberate Dillinger in jail for a Bluffton, O., bank robbery.

Federal officers joined Illinois and Indiana authorities in rounding up the gang. To date six have been captured, including the four held in Arizona, and one killed. Three of the convicts who escaped from Michigan City, Joseph Fox, Joseph Burns and John Hamilton, still are at large.

Besides the prison break the jail delivery and the murder of Barber, members of the gang have been accused of the killing of a policeman in Chicago two weeks ago during a roadside holdup and the slaying of another officer who attempted to arrest John Hamilton.

The bank robberies attributed to the gang include:

- Greencastle, Ind., Central National bank, $74,000.
- Indianapolis, Massachusetts Avenue Bank, $21,000.
- New Carlisle, O., bank, $53,000.
- Parry, Pa., bank, $24,000.
- Bluffton, O., bank, $2,800 (for which Dillinger was held in jail at Lima).
- Daleville, Ind., Commercial Bank, $3,500.
- Montpelier, Ind., National Bank, $12,000.
- Racine, Wis., American Bank & Trust Co., $27,000.

In addition to these, Makley has been identified as the leader of a gang in a $10,795 holdup of a bank at St. Marys, O., his former home.

Indiana Wants Them.

INDIANAPOLIS, Jan. 26.—Arrest warrants stating the charges upon which the four captured Indiana convicts are wanted here were telegraphed today to Tucson police by Al G. Peeney, public safety director of Indiana.

These officers carried extradition papers signed by Gov. Paul V. McNutt.

The arrest warrants telegraphed to Tucson police stated that John Dillinger, notorious leader of desperadoes, and Harry Pierpont, his lieutenant, are both wanted by Indiana and Ohio authorities for murder and bank robbery.

Dillinger and Pierpont are both under indictment in Allen county, Ohio, for the murder of Sheriff Jess Barber, which occurred when Dillinger was freed from jail there.

Dillinger May Be Wanted Here

May Have Been In Gang That Robbed Bank In Seventh Ward

With the capture of John Dillinger, Charles Makley, Russell Clark and Harry Pierpont, escaped bandits, in Tucson, Arizona, last night, interest here is revived in the possibility that they may have been the gang that murdered Policeman Clarence Campbell and robbed the Mahoning Trust Company messenger of $23,000.

Dillinger and his gang have been sought for months by police of a dozen states. On September 6, 1932 he was liberated by pals from the Lima, O., jail, and in the escape Sheriff Jess Barber was killed.

He has been identified as the leader of the mob which robbed the Farrell bank some months ago and the proximity of the Mahoning Trust job in May 1932 leads to the belief they may have had something to do with it.

Dillinger and his mob is thought, and when they are, it is likely that the Mahoning bank men will be sent there for the purpose of attempting identification.

Portland Cement holdings are located.

Would Handicap Township.

It is contended by Big Beaver township that to annex this land to Wampum will interfere seriously with the road and school systems of the township. The assessed valuation of all the property in Big Beaver township is approximately $833,000, and that of the borough proposed to annex, $501,000.

The school system of Big Beaver township has eight units, counting each room a unit. Only one room would be taken off by the borough by the annexation. This would relieve Big Beaver township of only one-eighth of the burden of maintaining schools, while five-eighths of the valuation would be lost.

It is claimed that the only supporter of the annexation proposal within the territory proposed to be annexed is the Crescent Portland Cement Company, and that while the Crescent Company supported the petition for annexation, its nature is not that of a freeholder, within the meaning of the law.

Big Beaver township school board claims that the annexation would be unjust and inequitable, and asks that the court restrain the borough from carrying the provisions of the ordinance into execution. Judge Hildebrand made an order requiring defendants to file an answer within 15 days. A hearing will then be held at a date to be announced by the court.

brilliant sleuths we have to fall into the hands of desert detectives who were lucky.

Sure we had money. Plenty of it. It takes money to live, but that doesn't mean we didn't get it honestly.

The guns don't mean a thing. We had to carry them around to protect ourselves from holdup men and gangsters who don't like us.

Ninety-nine per cent of what we are being accused of is false. We have been blamed for everything that has happened in the Midwest for the last two months. The police had to make goats out of somebody. We deny emphatically that we terrorized Illinois or Indiana.

Perhaps it's just as well that we are in jail.

We were tired and needed a good rest.

he is philosophically reconciled to the belief that no man who suffered so crushing a defeat as he did last election could expect to again be the party candidate.

But they also say that while Mr. Hoover is not interested in the nomination for himself, he is deeply concerned about who is to get it, and that he plans at the proper time to exert what leadership he has—to the end that the principles and the policies of his administration shall not be repudiated by the party.

Tragedy of Homesickness

To homesickness is attributed the moment of frenzy that caused Mrs. W. S. Grooch, of El Paso, Tex., to plunge to death with her two sons, William (left) and Thomas (right), from the eight-story roof of the apartment house where she dwelt in Shanghai, China. She had accompanied her husband, W. S. Grooch, to the Orient where he had been transferred by Pacific American Airways, of which he was an official.

U. S. SURVEYS AIRPORT SITE AT GROVE CITY

Municipal Field Now Probability As 80-Acre Site Is Leased

(Special To The News.)

GROVE CITY, Jan. 26.—A municipal airport for Grove City virtually assured today with the selection by the government of an 80-acre plot of farm land in Wolf Creek town, four miles north of the town, as the strategic point for the erection of one of a series of landing fields across northwestern Pennsylvania.

Grove City's council and the Commercial club today had taken out a five-year lease on the ground, owned by J. C. Wilson. The government has asked the borough to finance the project at the start.

Hoping to take advantage of funds appropriated for the CWA, the Grove City council and the Commercial club will immediately apply to federal authorities for $50,000 with which to finance the undertaking. It is expected that the request will be made as soon as the survey is completed.

The $50,000 would be spent in removing timber from the 80-acre site and in grading the plot to one level. It is said the Grove City location is the only airport site considered between Sharon and Emlenton.

nappers today had made no effort to collect nor to establish contact with Bremer's family, one of the most influential in St. Paul.

Still Await Word
Not since the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was kidnapped has so long a period of time elapsed in a kidnapping without there being some exchange of messages between the abductors and the family of the victim.

These facts were corroborated by members of the family and those close to Adolph Bremer, owner of the Jacob Schmidt Brewery and father of the kidnap victim.

Unauthenticated reports were current here that a contact had been made but that the gang holding young Bremer had decided that several days must elapse before he will be released.

These rumors emanated from the same source which last Tuesday reported that Bremer would be required that night. When the missing man failed to appear it was said that the "contact" had been "thwarted" by mistake.

Meanwhile the banker's family was growing increasingly distraught. Adolph Bremer, in his nearby home, hoping against hope that he will receive some communication from the kidnapers.

Mrs. Emily Bremer, wife of the banker, remained secluded in her home.

Suit In Equity For Accounting Of Funds Filed

Rosa Rosen Says She Gave Mr. And Mrs. R. W. Burdick $7300 To Invest

Rosa Rosen of Cleveland, O., has filed a suit in equity at the prothonotary's office against Gertrude Burdick and Rand W. Burdick, of Pukaski in which she seeks an accounting of $7,300, which she says that she entrusted to the Burdicks for investment.

Plaintiff claims that at various times she turned over money to the Burdicks. Of the amounts turned over she says that $2400 was deposited with the Home Savings & Trust Company of Ohio.

In 1928 plaintiff says that she gave Burdick $3,000 to invest in stock of the Ohio Edison Company and the Pennsylvania Power Company. It was understood that the certificates were to be taken out in the name of Rand W. Burdick, an employee of the company.

Plaintiff claims that she also turned over other money which was not deposited, exclusive of a mortgage which she holds on the Burdick home.

It is claimed by plaintiff that she has tried to get an accounting of the money turned over to the Burdicks but has been unable to do so. She asks that they be restrained from transferring any accounts or certificates, or encumbering them, pending an outcome of the suit now filed.

The court directed that an answer be filed within 15 days, after which a hearing will be held at which the stories of both sides will be heard.

Jake The Barber Identifies Touhy
Also Identifies Two Others On Trial As Members Of Kidnaping Gang

(International News Service)
CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—John (Jake the Barber) Factor, wealthy stock manipulator, today identified Albert Kator and Gus Schaefer as two members of the Touhy gang which kidnapped him last spring and finally the youthful Roger Touhy himself as the spokesman for the kidnapers.

Only Eddie McFadden, old and stolid, frequently referred to as the "front" for the mob, escaped Factor's daring identification. Although the one-time millionaire promoter broke down and wept frequently during his testimony, there was no breaking as he dramatically, but calmly stepped from the witness box and pointed out Kator and Schaefer.

It was while he told about a letter the kidnapers permitted him to write to his wife that Factor electrified the courtroom by pointing out Touhy as one of the men he saw standing beside him as he wrote.

BETTER ENFORCEMENT

NOTING that 30 legislative proposals have been recommended by the special committee of the United States senate that investigated crime conditions, one is forced to wonder whether the committee may not have lost sight of the most important question in connection with crime prevention.

Better enforcement rather than new laws is needed. Some of the committee's proposals are designed to strengthen enforcement. Others are in the nature of new laws.

If all existing laws were enforced 100 per cent the country would be crime-free. Perfect enforcement, of course, is an impossibility. Much depends upon the officials upon whom the task falls. Few communities have not had the experience of seeing crime flourish under one set of officials, only to disappear almost when a new set took charge and began a drive.

Too much attention has been paid to new laws as a curb on crime. Many of those proposed would be no easier of enforcement than existing statutes which have proved ineffective. These have been ineffective not because they were weak or inadequate, but because they were not enforced.

HUEY LONG GETS ANOTHER SWAT

The Honorable Huey Long has taken it on the chin again. Some months ago he was given a physical beating in a Long Island club and now this has been followed with a political thrashing in New Orleans, his old stronghold.

His mayoralty candidate ran behind in a primary election that had Long for a chief issue.

Huey's term in the senate does not expire until 1937, so it can not be said that he is down and out. But he has certainly received a sock on the political jaw.

SHABBY SHOES AND RECOVERY

The shoe men attending a convention of the Middle Atlantic Shoe Retailers Association have a clever slogan. It is "Wear Good Shoes and End the Depression."

"Worn shoes," declares one of the members, "signify the beaten man. They make you look like 1932 and 1933, the worst of the depression years. You can not look like winning, and win, if you wear shabby shoes."

The hat man and all of the other dealers in clothing could make similar assertions about their wares and they would be right.

It is another way of telling you to hold up your chin and look the world in the face. For the man who can afford it the formula is a good one. Its application would improve the individual's morale and at the same time help business.

THE PYMATUNING DAM A REALITY

With the closing of the gates in the main dam this week the Pymatuning reservoir, dream of two generations of civic leaders in the Shenango and Beaver Valleys, becomes reality and a monument to the men who worked so vigorously and untiringly for it.

The benefits which will be derived by New Castle, Sharon, Farrell and other cities from the reservoir project cannot be determined, but they undoubtedly will be greater than has been foreseen. With a water supply more than adequate for any need; with flood danger reduced to a minimum and with sanitary conditions greatly improved, the valley will be one of the most desirable locations for industrial development in the entire state.

A bright future is dawning for this district and in their enjoyment of progress and prosperity its citizens should not forget the debt they owe all those who visioned and worked for the Pymatuning dam.

SLANG FINDS ANOTHER FRIEND

Now that a college professor, Prof. G. W. Latham, of the department of English of McGill University, Montreal, has approved slang, it may be used without a shock to the conscience. It is just as well to give it full approval because there is no chance of the American surrendering his privilege of giving his language any twist he desires. There is nothing more beautiful than pure English, but somehow we cling to the custom of "packing a wallop into a few words." Someone makes a remark which appears to "hit the spot," everybody grasps it and it sweeps over the country.

There is something about slang which makes it keep running through the mind like one of those tunes which for no apparent reason, and certainly not because of any musical excellence, become so popular that they finally die from overwork. This is not a defense of slang; our speech would be better if we abandoned it and stuck to "straight English," but the American tendency to seek short cuts even in expressing our thoughts will keep it alive, regardless of whether we approve or disapprove. Slang is the spice of speech, but we must be careful because an overdose of spice will ruin any food.

LESS WAR TALK

The softened tone of dispatches from Tokyo dealing with Japanese-American relations is a development to give encouragement to all Americans interested in fostering good will between these two nations.

What has caused this change must be left to speculation. Whether it was recognition of Russia or the projected strengthening of the American fleet to treaty limits can not be known. That a change has taken place in the attitude of Japanese officials toward the United States is evident, though, to any observant reader of current dispatches from Japan. There is an absence of the challenging statements formerly attributed to "a spokesman for the foreign office" and aimed at certain American policies or proposals. Not many months ago such statements were frequent. They still times took on an almost belligerent tone.

Most of the comment attributed to official sources now is of a conciliatory nature and stresses the importance of Japan and the United States working together in the interest of world peace and in the settlement of controversial questions arising in the Pacific.

A further and much more definite move for courting American good will now is contemplated by Japan. The plan at present is in only a tentative state, with its complete development depending on a visit to Washington by Ambassador Saito. The latter is scheduled to arrive in the American capital the latter part of February. He will attempt to size up the situation here as affecting Japanese-American relations and return to Tokyo to report his observations to the foreign office.

Foreign Minister Hirota is quoted as expressing the belief that the interests of Japan and the United States are in serious conflict at no point and that the relations between these two countries normally should be smooth. He is represented as aiming at a policy of mutual confidence with America recognizing Japan as the only stable power in Asia and Japan recognizing America's place in the Pacific.

YOU . . . You . . . You
You have fits of depression. They go away . . . and you don't know why they go, nor why they came.

When you have a pain in your side, you fear appendicitis first of all. You don't mind dying, but you don't want to suffer.

You like praise . . . but you say far worse things about yourself than anybody else does.

You swagger . . . but inside of you you are one of the humblest people on earth.

You feel hurt when your friend's dog snarls at you.

You are sentimental about your home town, but you don't intend to go back there to live.

Half the time when you try to poach an egg you forget it and it gets too hard.

You don't mind cutting the lawn, but trimming the edges annoys you.

You like to sit by an open fireplace, and the fire crackling merrily, when a storm is raging around the house.

You like children, but not all children.

Sometimes you are cynical, but cynicism isn't your natural way of looking at life.

You wonder if all other people feel as young and inexperienced as you do.

You wonder how much you are YOU and how much you are the sum of all your ancestors.

You wonder if cheerful people are that cheerful when they are all by themselves.

You never told anybody ALL about yourself.

And you don't agree with half of these impudent remarks about yourself.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST

I GO HOME FOR LUNCH

In little town I fancy still the factory whistle blows

At noon and homeward to his lunch the happy husband goes.

And women folks at twelve o'clock the mid-day meal prepare.

Because their men are coming home and shortly will be there.

I tried it out the other day, went home to lunch and found

That city wives at noon don't care to have their men around.

"What, home for lunch?" the mother cried. "Oh, what a thing to do!

You know right well we haven't time to plan a meal for you."

The maid looked startled and she said: "Give me my coat and hat!

I don't believe I care to work here! That means an extra place to set, an extra plate and spoon.

Besides we've nothing in the house to feed a man at noon."

I learned that I was wholly wrong; that times are different now

And coming home for lunch is one thing wives do not allow.

Two meals a day are quite enough for women folk to plan,

And anyhow no one at noon expects to feed a man

So henceforth at my favorite club my mid-day meal I'll munch

And never shock them so again by going home for lunch.

BARE FACTS
Do you ever quake when you are in the presence of a dignitary? Some people are overwhelmed by the prestige that clothes or position give to a man.

A psychologist suggests a way to eliminate this fear: When a big man stares at you, and you tremble just a bit, look him coolly for a moment and try to imagine him without clothes. This will enable you to regain control of yourself. Carlyle, the sharp-tongued Scotsman, could not imagine a naked House of Lords. EDITOR WAS "APPRECIATED"
All this talk an editor is not appreciated, it seems, is nonsense. An exchange tells how an editor of a neighboring town was presented a handsome bouquet by a bunch of fellow citizens. On the same occasion a quartet from a local church sang a few songs and a minister made a little talk.

After the minister's talk six husky men carried the popular editor from the house and placed him in a model 1934 plumed sedan, and the whole town formed a parade. Japanese Threats Endanger World

Semi-Official Soviet Newspaper Pravda Says Movements Aggressive

(International News Service)
MOSCOW, Jan. 26—The entire world is endangered "by the aggressive movement being featured by Japanese military adventures and expansionists." The semi-official soviet newspaper Pravda charged today.

In a special article devoted to comment on the recent speech delivered before the Japanese diet by Koki Hirota, foreign minister of Japan, Pravda declared that his peaceful sentiment could not offset the damage done by the military clique of his country.

"Hirota's speech," Pravda said, "probably was intended to play a certain favorable role in the betterment of international relations with Japan. But it can hardly be said to have achieved its aim."

Choice Phrases
"Hirota sought to minimize the tense situation in the far east, responsibility for which rests fully on the shoulders of the Japanese, but it is obvious he is unable to shape off the burden by a few choice phrases."

"The soviet government has repeatedly shown its readiness to guarantee peace in the far east by offering Japan a pact of non-aggression, by its agreement to create a soviet Japanese Manchurian border commission and by its willingness to sell the Chinese eastern railway."

Failure of Japan to accept these offers, Pravda declared, "places the blame upon Tokyo for any eventualities which may arise."

Johnson Makes Stirring Plea

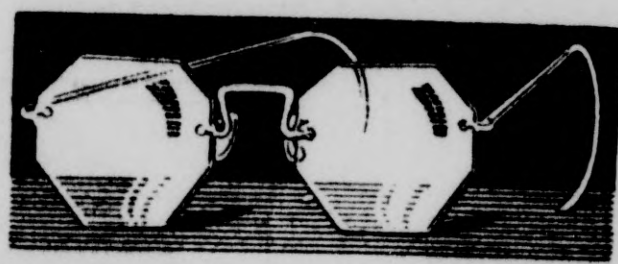

General Johnson Delivers Stirring Talk On NRA At Boston, Mass.

(International News Service)
BOSTON, Jan. 26—The NRA codes are now at a critical stage. "Chiselers" and cheaters are to be crushed in closing up the ranks for the forward march ahead. Ninety per cent of complaints against the blue eagle come from greedy exploiters of labor, who should go to an up-to-date pillory.

Leaving behind this characteristic message in a speech last night before 2,000 persons at a chamber of commerce banquet in Worcester, General Hugh S. Johnson, blue eagle chief, prepared to take today by airplane for Washington.

The general promised his Worcester audience that the entire machinery of the NRA would soon be taken apart, inspected, worn parts replaced and then put together, stronger and more durable.

Kaiser To Observe His 75th Birthday

Doorn, Holland, Is Mecca Today Of Loyal German Monarchists

(International News Service)
DOORN, Holland, Jan. 26—With its lustre somewhat dimmed by Hitler to power of Chancellor Adolf Hitler in Germany, Doorn house once again became the mecca of loyal German monarchists today as former Kaiser Wilhelm prepared to celebrate his 75th birthday tomorrow.

On this date last year, when Germany was in fever of unrest and the Weimar Democratic constitution being subjected to the first hammer blows which shortly afterward resulted in its extinction, Doorn house was the scene of high hopes and vaulting ambitions.

Monarchy Forgotten
On January 26, 1932, monarchist restoration in Germany appeared more than a remote possibility. Rumors flew that Wilhelm II, was preparing at least to visit his fatherland in the hopes his people would extend him a royal welcome and possibly make room in the changing scheme of things for the Hohenzollern crown.

But with the rise tide in the past twelve months the monarchy has been thrust further and further into the background while Chancellor Hitler proceeded with his creation of a brown-shirted Reich.

As preparations went forward for the celebration, the fiction of Wilhelm's might and power was preserved faithfully by those in his immediate circle who like to recall that he never abdicated as King of Prussia and remains entitled to be termed "majesty."

FEW COMPLAINTS

County commissioners, sitting as a board of appeals for the Fifth ward, had very few complaints over assessments today. This is taken as an indication that property holders believe their valuations to have been equitable.

Factor Ready For Testimony Against Touhy

Chicago Court Looks Like Armed Fortress As Kidnapers Are Being Tried

THREATS MADE AGAINST FACTOR

(International News Service) CHICAGO, Jan. 26.—Three score armed officers were massed in criminal court today as John "Jake the Barber" Factor, disregarding threats against his life, prepared to testify against the four Touhy gangsters on trial for his kidnaping.

To prevent fulfillment of numerous threats that death will follow Factor's courtroom identification of the four defendants whom he named as his kidnapers, authorities doubled the guard in Judge Michael Feinberg's court.

Police On Guard
Guns strapped to their sides, the army of police and bailiffs gave the criminal court building a fortress-like air. Until today between 30 and 40 officers were on duty to prevent a possible rescue of the "terrific" Factor.

Factor, the state's star witness and its main hope of convicting the four defendants, was ready to identify the Touhyites as the kidnapers who took $70,000 ransom money as the price of his freedom after being held captive for twelve days.

The four defendants—Roger Touhy, asserted leader of the gang; Gus Schaeffer, Albert Kator and Edward McFadden—face a possible sentence of death in the electric chair if convicted.

PASTOR CONVICTED OF DRUNKEN DRIVING

Mr. Williams is a charter member of the First Congregational church and the Star of Wales lodge. He was a night foreman at the tin mill here for some time.

MODERN 'FAGIN' IS JAILED FOR 12 YEARS

(International News Service) OMAHA, Neb.—George W. McDonald, for his role as "Fagin" in a modern "Oliver Twist" is now serving a 12 year penitentiary sentence.

New Income Tax Bill To Emerge

Numerous Changes In Income Tax Law Provisions Are Forecasted

TREASURY WINS ON CHIEF ISSUE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL
International News Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—A new $250,000,000 tax revision bill containing compromises between the treasury and its investigating subcommittee is expected to be virtually completed by the house Ways and Means Committee today.

Originally proposed to fill loopholes in the income tax laws disclosed in the Morgan-Mitchell-Wiggin testimony before the senate banking committee, the measure considered the reform program to radically change the basis of the income tax system.

Yielding to pleas of the treasury, the committee modified many provisions which, it was charged, would place business under great handicaps during the recovery period.

As this far approved the measure, a heavier burden on many classes of taxpayers, particularly those having incomes from stocks and bonds.

In plugging loopholes, the committee proposed changes which will materially increase the tax burden of many corporations.

The treasury won a victory when the committee tentatively adopted a proposal to require husbands and wives to file a joint income tax return.

The plan is estimated to yield $40,000,000 a year by pushing the joint income of husband and wife into the higher surtax brackets.

Rep. Hill (D) of Washington, chairman of the investigating subcommittee, led the fight against the change. He charged the treasury's proposal is unconstitutional.

The treasury was to give battle with the committee in an effort to knock out the investigation subcommittee's recommendation for abolition of foreign tax credits and restriction upon tax returns of reorganized corporations. The two proposals embrace an estimated $28,000,000 tax gain.

The committee's bill as thus far approved included a boost of $36,000,000 in income taxes, restoration of credit for earned income, a 35 per cent penalty on undistributed earnings of personal holding companies, and restrictions upon capital gains and losses.

Barbara Meets Her Husband On Ship At Tokyo

Joyous Meeting Takes Place Between Wealthy Wife And Prince Alexis
Mdivani

"JIMMY" DONOHUE
MEETS DANCER

By JAMES R. YOUNG
International News Service Staff Correspondent
TOKYO, Jan. 26.—The separate, trouble-bedecked honeymoon trials of Prince Alexis Mdivani and the former Barbara Hutton, Woodworth heiress, were joined in Tokyo today as the couple reunited after a two weeks' parting.

Although the prince since his arrival here Wednesday had shown great eagerness to see his bride again, he greeted her as she arrived on the Japanese liner Tatsuta Maru in what he himself termed "oriental style."

Oriental Style.
He went directly to Barbara's luxurious royal suite and sent a cabin boy to the smoking room to tell Barbara to come to him.

"That's oriental style," he smiled.
"Women obey their husbands here."
The meeting was very gay. There were scores of reporters, Japanese and American, but the interviews were kept on a highly jovial level by "Jimmy" Donohue, Barbara's cousin and himself an heir to many of the Woolworth five and ten cent store dollars, who accompanied Barbara on her solo honeymoon crossing of the Pacific.

Spanish Dancer.
Although Barbara's trip was interesting, the high spot of the voyage appeared to be young Donohue's meeting with Laverne Lambert, a dark, Spanish-type dancer, with whom he danced frequently during the voyage.

Warwick Speaks To Pittsburghers On Need For Canal

Addresses Pittsburgh Rotary Club On Slackwatering
Of Local Streams

H. S. Warwick of Youngstown, addressed the members of the Pittsburgh Rotary Club on Wednesday, on the need for canalization of the Beaver and Mahoning rivers, and stressed the importance of canals in the development of Pennsylvania.
He told the Pittsburgh group that the improvement of the Beaver-Mahoning water highway would create the second largest tonnage feeder to the present Ohio River system, thus further justifying the large expenditure of money thus far made on the Ohio and Mississippi River systems.

He stated that eighty per cent of the coal consumption of the Shen-ango and Mahoning valleys originates in the Pittsburgh district, and that eighty per cent of the proposed improvement lies within the state of Pennsylvania.

Two Sisters Die On R. R. Trestle

Were Out Looking For Work When Run Down By Train

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Jan. 26.— Taking a short cut in a hunt for work two elderly sisters were killed instantly on a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad trestle here today.

Mrs. Andrew Kish, 63, was taking her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Halak, 50, a widow, to the residence of the Rev.
George Borsi-Kerekes, pastor of a Hungarian Reformed church, to see him about getting Mrs. Halak work as a housekeeper at the Hungarian Reformed church orphanage at Ligonier, Pa.

The women started across the trestle over the Mahoning river rather than walk a mile or so around to the West avenue bridge.
They were part way across when a fast eastbound passenger train whistled behind them.

Mrs. Kish tried to jump off the trestle and her sister tried to beat the train to the end of the bridge, but both were caught beneath the wheels. Their bodies were badly mangled.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathar-tics that leave you so thirsty. Dr.
Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

Auto Code Draws Wide Attention

Success Of State Laws Brings International Inquiries From Many Counties

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—The success of Pennsylvania's compulsory motor vehicle inspection law annually commands wider international attention.

The Department of Revenue's Division of Safety is now at work on a summary of the law and its results, prepared on a request from the West Indies. Previous requests for information have come from places as distant as South Africa and Germany.

Current reports from the inspection campaign which began January 1 and extends to March 31 show a steady increase in the number of cars approved without repair. The Division of Safety stresses this fact as evidence that the campaigns are educating owners to the importance of keeping their machines in good mechanical condition and reducing the accident danger to themselves and other highway users.

timated expenditure of from $20,- 000 to $25,000 it is said.

SUPERVISORS PROTEST COUNTY CWA WORK CUT

Pass Resolution At Convention

Can't See Reason For Unequal Cut In Employment Hours For CWA

ELECT BRADLEY YEAR'S PRESIDENT

Road supervisors and auditors of the county, in convention at the court house Thursday, passed a resolution opposing the drastic cut in CWA hours made in rural districts. Hours in the country have been reduced fifty per cent, while in the city a reduction of only twenty per cent has been made, they said. The supervisors do not see any reason why there should be such a difference.

In another resolution the convention went on record as opposed to the centralization of so much power in the state highway department at Harrisburg. This resolution was the outcome of a discussion in which it was alleged that there is too much delay in providing means of repairing country roads when the projects have to be submitted to Harrisburg. The resolution committee was composed of Doris Fulkman, C. O. McConnell and H. J. Kennehan.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: president, F. W. Bradley, Pulaski township; vice president, J. M. McConnell, Washington township; secretary, J. W. Cox, Wilmington township; treasurer, D. B. Reynolds, Neshannock township.

Delegates to the state convention to be held at Reading, John Shaw, Washington township; Frank Smith, Shenango township. Alternates, E. M. Sheridan, Union township and Andrew Johnston, Scott township. A report of the state convention held last year was given by D. B. Reynolds of Neshannock township. Milo D. Paden, of Mahoning township, who has held the office of president for several years made remarks in which he thanked the supervisors for their hearty cooperation.

Round Gives Talk
Civil Works Administrator L. B. Round gave an interesting account of the work which has been accomplished in Lawrence county since CWA was organized. He said that it had been hurriedly done in order to give employment to as many people as possible within a limited time. In the hurry some mistakes had been made, but they are being corrected and the many different projects are now functioning smoothly.

Since the work got under way materials and supplies have been furnished by city, county and township officials, costing, upwards of $74,000, while the amount to be paid out for labor up until February 15, will be around $500,000.

Mr. Round explained what the townships are expected to furnish in the way of materials and equipment and answered a number of questions from persons in the audience.

State Engineer Speaks
J. L. Campbell of Pittsburgh, assistant engineer of maintenance of highways, gave an address in which he explained a number of problems which have been vexing road supervisors. In his address Mr. Campbell said:

"Your kind invitation to attend this meeting gives me, as a representative of the Pennsylvania Department of Highways, an opportunity to extend to you the thanks of H. E. Kloos, District Engineer, at Pittsburgh and of H. W. Lightner, Superintendent in our work of maintaining and improving the rural route system. We solicit your continued cooperation in our greatly increased work now before us."

"Upon completion of the present construction programs over 122 miles of the 202 miles on the rural system in Lawrence County will be improved."

"The additional mileage for maintenance received under the Parkinson Act will increase the total mileage under Superintendent Lightner in Lawrence County to 863 miles."

"The maintenance of these Second Class Township roads presents so many new problems, different in many ways from ordinary maintenance that we are particularly anxious to chat over them with you."

"The Department of Highways will be limited to an expenditure of approximately $17.00 per mile per year, and this limit must not be exceeded, even in case of emergency, in any township. In seven of your townships, your expenditure for road maintenance in 1932 was very much in excess of that figure. In three of them the average was nearly three times our allotment. In ten townships your maintenance expenditure was less than $100.00 per mile in 1932."

Study Local Conditions
Our Assistant Superintendents are now making a study of local conditions existing on these roads and have been instructed to consult you gentlemen and the people living on the roads for information. We are limited to work on Second Class Township roads and only roads shown on the township road maps and which have been maintained by you."

We must consult you regarding the use of serviceable township-owned equipment and make satisfactory arrangements with you before using any of it. Repairs to this equipment may be made only with the consent and approval of the supervisors owning the equipment. Insurance should be carried by townships, the owners. We are not permitted to repair any township road bridges. We must not undertake regular maintenance work on township roads during seasons when satisfactory results cannot be obtained. Roads under contract or special agreement must not be touched."

Our maintenance work does not include snow removal. We do not have authority to make any entry upon adjoining land for the purpose of opening ditches and will therefore be obliged to call on you frequently to provide outlets. The second class township roads remain your responsibility and no where in our instructions has anything been said that will prevent you from performing maintenance on them. We feel confident that a continuation of the same cooperation you have given us in the past will guarantee that our combined efforts will work out agreeably and economically."

Ernest Trimble, engineer of Pittsburgh also made a few remarks.

Answers Questions
County Highway Superintendent H. W. Lightner gave an account of the work being done in Lawrence county, and answered a number of questions asked by supervisors. It was brought out that Mr. Lightner is not responsible for what supervisors consider delays. He is allotted so much money to maintain roads, and when the amount is to be expended for any project, it must be taken up with the state highway department at Harrisburg. Mr. Lightner said that he only wished that he had the money to put through all the repair work necessary in the county.

At the close of the meeting it was announced that township CWA supervisors and timekeeper will meet here at the East Street school house this evening.

County Highway Superintendent H. W. Lightner gave an account of the work being done in Lawrence county, and answered a number of questions asked by supervisors. It was brought out that Mr. Lightner is not responsible for what supervisors consider delays. He is allotted so much money to maintain roads, and when the amount is to be expended for any project, it must be taken up with the state highway department at Harrisburg. Mr. Lightner said that he only wished that he had the money to put through all the repair work necessary in the county.

At the close of the meeting it was announced that township CWA supervisors and timekeeper will meet here at the East Street school house this evening.

FARM, HENS, PIGS AND CATTLE ALL CAME FROM SOW

(International News Service)
WEYMOUTH, Mass., Jan. 26.—One sow, at compound interest over a period of 18 years, equals 75 head of cattle, 800 hens, 1,000 pigs and a 96-acre farm.
At least that was what Edward Dwyer, 31, did with a capital of one sow purchased in 1915 for $3. This is how he did it: The sow had a litter, all were exchanged for a cow; from the milk obtained Dwyer started a modest milk route; income was used to purchase more cows, until he had a sizeable stock.

In 1921 he took time out to attend an agricultural school, and then went into farming on a larger scale. First he purchased 36 acres here, all from profits of his business. Later he added sixty acres.

Today he is vice president of the Weymouth Milk Producers' association, director of the Weymouth Agricultural and Industrial society, and has served on the advisory board of the Norfolk county agricultural school.

He has been cited by the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture "for creditable accomplishments in dairying."

CHANCES OF BEING HIT BY LIGHTNING

IS 1 IN 200,000

(International News Service)
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Six persons were killed, nineteen others were injured and property worth thousands of dollars was destroyed by lightning bolts in Indiana during 1933 according to statistics kept during the year by the Indianapolis Bureau of International News Service.
Since the population of Indiana in 1933 was approximately 3,500,000 and 25 persons were struck by lightning, the chances of being hit by a bolt were about 1 in 140,000. If 1934 is a normal year the Hoosier chances of being struck by lightning will be about 1 in 200,000, it was estimated.

→ Daily the number of men employed is increasing everywhere.
→ Rising purchasing power means greater consumption of goods.
→ The increased costs of Wool, Cotton, Silk will raise prices.

State Conscience Fund Enriched By Fine Sum Of $161

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—Pennsylvania's "Conscience Fund" in the state treasury was $161 richer today but the donor's identity and residence were shrouded in mystery.

Wrapped in plain brown paper, the $161 arrived addressed to "The State Treasurer of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg, Penna."

The money was old-fashioned large-sized currency—101 one dollar bills and 30 two dollar bills.

Narrow strips of newspaper used to bind the money into a compact package contained part of an advertisement inserted by W. Arthur Barr, 110 Valley street, an undertaker. The town was not listed.

Y. W. C. A. Will Present Musical Production In Cathedral In February

The opening rehearsal for the play to be produced by the Y. W. C. A. will take place Monday evening, January 29, in the Y. W. C. A. beginning with a dinner at 6:30.

At this time Mrs. Roy Long, captain of the ticket committee, will meet with her captains and committees and the final plans will be made.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Martin will direct the production of "Up in the Air" and the play will be presented in the Cathedral the evenings of February 15 and 16.

Good Will Grads Told Of Orchids

Thursday evening at 8 o'clock the members of the Good Will Graduate club of the Y. W. C. A. had as guest speaker Thomas Cunningham, who spoke on "Orchids, and Flowers in General"

Mr. Cunningham's talk was very interesting in that he traced the origin of the orchid to the Andes mountains and pointed out that the flower is not a parasite as many believe but grows on air. The different steps in the development of the rose were also very interesting.

Members present were Helen Howley, Dot Sankey, Virginia Allen, Clara Isolda, Harriet Owens, Eleanor Fuller, Mabel Kegarse, Connie and Edith Montanary, Helen Miles, Christine DeCarbo, Sara Cukerbaum and Matilda Antilla. New members of the club are Eleanor Brenner, Elizabeth Louers and Mildred Owens.

Guests last evening were Dorothy Blim and Lili Campbell.

Marian Wilson of the "Y" was in charge for the evening.

OUST COMMUNIST STUDENTS IN SOFIA

(International News Service)
SOFIA, Jan. 26.—Sofia university is making short shrift of Communist students.

No less than 40 have recently been expelled, because of repeated troubles and disturbances they caused during the first semester. The academic council has warned that in future it will deal summarily with all "recalcitrant and mischievous students," and will not merely resort to its former practice of closing the university each time an outbreak occurs.

UNIQUE PLAY USED ONLY ONE VOWEL

(International News Service)
BUDAPEST, Hungary, Jan. 26.—No other vowel than "E" occurred in the entire text of a long one-act radio play, broadcast from the Budapest station during the Christmas holidays.

Product of Joseph Graetzer, the well-known Hungarian humorist, the piece was entitled "Elemer esete Fekete Erzebettel," or "The First of Elemer and Elizabeth Fekete." Only actors whose names began with E were chosen to interpret it.

The most used vowel in the Hungarian language is E, and almost everything can be expressed in words containing only that vowel.

PRESERVED PEACHES OVER 45 YEARS

GREAT BEND, Kan., Jan. 26.—Two yellow cling peaches, apparently 45 years old, were found perfectly preserved in a wall of the F. F. Durham house.

Joe Kramer, a carpenter repairing the house, found them with papers and letters dated 1887 and 1888. One peach was eaten and seemed normal in taste.

The house was built in 1875. The peaches did not appear to have been hermetically sealed.

A MILLION, IF — by FRANK LYNN PARK

With a Million Pitted Against a Girl
What Is a Young Man to Do—But Go Fishing!

Illustrated by STIRLING HILL

Maitland Vincent entrusted his coat, his hat, and his scarf to the care of the cloak-room girl. The restaurant was crowded with a noontime throng of office workers, people who had positions, not merely jobs. On the frail balcony, the trio was playing Tosselli's Serenade. By that Maitland knew that the lunchers who had arrived immediately after twelve were eating their salads. Had they been playing the Anvil Chorus, it would have meant that the course was soup. Had the number been Trümperei, it would have signified that the piece de resistance was on the tables. Had it been the Song of the Vagabonds, it would have informed him that the patrons were jousting with their desserts. It took exactly half an hour for the trio to complete its repertoire. It was the opinion of the management that no well-bred diner should devote more time than that to his meal. When the musicians commenced to repeat the selections, regular clients were overcome by a sense of guilt, and, either hurrying their last courses or leaving what remained uneaten on their plates, they would rise and apologetically dash out, allowing others to take their places. Thus was Art made to wait on Mammon.

Maitland Vincent was an extremely tall young man. He had, a few years before, found his unusual longitude decidedly to his advantage in enveloping forward passes, dropping goals from various difficult points on the court, and intimidating batters. At the present, it was of great assistance to him in observing parades, attracting miscellaneous bits of animated fluff, and inspiring awe in the hearts of the head-waiters. That last function it was now fulfilling. A little dark man behind a large light moustache was for a moment defiantly certain that it would be impossible for Mr. Vincent to wander about the restaurant searching for a young woman with whom he had an appointment. The man's defiant certainty was limited to a moment, however, due principally to the fact that Mr. Vincent lifted him lightly from his path and dropped him quietly to the side, issuing gentle admonitions against the possibility of any similar procedure on his part in the future.

The young woman with whom he had the appointment and for whom he was searching was Miss Delma Hughes. The same fates that had provided Maitland Vincent with several inches of excess height had deprived Delma Hughes of several inches of her rightful allotment. It was the practice of uninspired people, upon seeing Mr. Vincent and Miss Hughes together, to emit clever comparisons having to do with Mutt and Jeff. And, as the tall young man and the short young woman were making arrangements to spend the rest of their lives in each other's company, it appeared that the banal jest would continue to thrive.

The girl was raising a cup of coffee to her lips when the upward progress of her arm was arrested by a grip which, if it could not be mistaken for iron, by the same token could not be confused with rubber. She did not look at the owner of the grip.

"A little late," she commented smilingly. "Join me," she invited. Both the smile and the words had been subjected to a refrigerating process.

Mr. Vincent joined her by the simple expedient of straddling a chair which was pushed away from the table by the wedge-like action of his body.

"Couldn't you be a bit more cordial in greeting your fiancé?" he asked.

"Couldn't you be a bit more accurate in keeping appointments with your fiancée?" she countered.

"I have an excuse, a good one," he assured her.

"Well?" She indicated her willingness to listen, and also her readiness to scoff when she had finished listening.

"First of all," Maitland began, "I have an uncle. That's why the name of your husband-to-be is what it is and not something prosaic like John, James, or Joseph."

"An affectionate gesture on the part of your parents?" Delma queried.

"That's it," he agreed. "The customary tactless tribute to the wealthy relative."

"Did he turn up this morning?" Delma wanted to know.

"He didn't and he won't on any future mornings. He was down in Bermuda for the season, and while he was there, although several eminent and efficient physicians voted in favor of letting him live for a few more years, the grim chairman vetoed the measure." Maitland eliminated his usual flippancy in making the statement, but his features failed to reach any profound degree of seriousness.

"You mean—he's dead?" Delma could be depended upon to preserve the proper balance of sentiment.

"Uh-huh. I was informed of the fact in a letter from his lawyers. I read it over a few times; that's what delayed me."

"You're certainly not displaying any staggering amount of nephevis regret," Delma protested.

"It's rather difficult for me to exhibit an emotion which I don't honestly feel. You see," he explained, "I never met the old tortoise."

The explanation was satisfactory to Delma. Hers was not a maudlin nature.

"You're forgiven," she relented. "But why refer to him as a shell-back?"

"It's the only appropriate designation. I never heard the whole yarn, but from what was told me I inferred that he was one of those people who, after being disappointed in their pursuit of the delicate passion, go into retirement and play the hermit."

"Poor fellow," Delma sympathized. "He probably became a woman-hater. Did those lawyers have anything else to say?"

"There was something else, a brief reference to a will, and to call at their offices at my earliest convenience," he told her.

"When are you going to drop in on them?" Delma queried.

"As soon as I deposit you safely at your place of business."

"Are you the only heir?" Delma tried to ask the question lightly but did not succeed.

"As far as I know, I am."

"Then you should get a fairly large slice of the cake," she maintained. The prospect pleased her.

Maitland was quick to disillusion her.

"I doubt it," he said. "I've convinced myself that I'm scheduled to get one of those crisp new dollar bills with which apoplectic uncles are said to cut off undeserving nephews. The rest will probably go to some organization for the slaughter of girl-babies."

"You're not very hopeful," Delma protested.

"I've no reason to be. I'll go over and collect the dollar and tell you all about it this evening," he promised.

"Don't forget to bring it with you," she warned him. "We'll have to frame it."

The law firm of Bellew, Bellew, Fischer and Bellew is a heritage of the days of Laura Jean Libbey, free lunches, and periphrasis. These are the days of Walter Winchell, cover charges, and terseness. Years ago, Lawyer Fischer departed from the world of briefs, torts, and malfeasance for other, perhaps less-exciting fields. His name remained on the door and on the letter-head, partly as a point of personal recognition, and partly as a quiet reminder of the cycle which starts and ends with dust. The surviving attorneys had formulated an arrangement whereby their work, what there was of it, might be done with a minimum of effort and irritation. Each one worked only two days a week.

Jasper Bellew was the second member of the firm, reading from left to right. Wednesdays and Thursdays were his days at the office. It was Thursday, and Jasper was exceedingly nervous. Mr. Maitland Perrin, one of the firm's oldest clients, both in matters of years and association, had died. Clients of Bellew, Bellew, Fischer and Bellew had died before. On those occasions, Jasper had neither felt nor exhibited surprise or discomfort. In Mr. Perrin's case it was somewhat different. He had left behind him the sum of approximately one million dollars. Jasper had expected him to die. Jasper had also expected him to leave behind him two million dollars. But Mr. Perrin had stipulated an unusual method of disposing of that million. It was that that Jasper had not expected, and it was that that was making him nervous.

Miss Dilley, the secretary-stenographer, opened the door of his office.

"Mr. Vincent is here," she said. The lady, who no longer could be called young, was a trifle frightened.

Jasper coughed, sneezed and grimaced for a brief period.

"Have him come in," he said finally.

Jasper had been waiting for a representative of the "younger generation."

He had been prepared for such a large edition of the species. He understood the cause of Miss Dilley's fright.

McClure Fiction

"Mr. Vincent?" he queried meekly.

"Uh-huh," Maitland confessed. He had immediately classified Jasper as one of those "long-winded old duffers." Jasper's beard could mean only that.

"Please sit down, sir."

Maitland sat down, certain that he was in for an oration of one of the more virulent types.

"I am given to understand," said Jasper, "that you were not acquainted with your late uncle." It was half question, half pronouncement.

"That's right," Maitland helped.

"A very estimable man; solid," Jasper proclaimed.

"So I've been informed," Maitland contributed.

"But not a family man," continued Jasper, as if that were another point in favor of the deceased. "You, Mr. Vincent, were his only relative."

From a vest pocket Jasper extracted a snap spectacle case. From the case he extracted a pair of glasses, which was, like Jasper himself, a relic. He placed them on his nose and through them glared disapproval at Maitland.

"I think they're on backside to," Maitland suggested.

Jasper reversed them, discontinued his glaring, and took from a drawer a sheet of paper, adorned by a specimen of a prim and confident handwriting.

Holding the paper at a convenient, although graceless, angle, he commenced to read:

"I, Maitland Perrin, am about to die. By hard and diligent work I have accumulated about one million dollars. As I am childless, my only heir is one Maitland Vincent, the son of my late sister, Grace, and of her late husband, James Joseph Vincent. It has been my great good fortune never to have met the young man. I have, none the less, interested myself in his activities. I am informed that he is engaged to be married to a young woman, Miss Delma Hughes. I order my nephew to have nothing to do with said Miss Hughes for a period of one year, the year to start when this letter is read to him by my lawyers. His inheritance of the money will depend absolutely upon his obedience or disobedience of my injunction. I instruct my attorneys, the Messrs. Bellew, Bellew, Fischer and Bellew, to see that my wishes are carried out in this matter."

Maitland Perrin."

Jasper folded the paper carefully and replaced it in the drawer.

When he looked up, the chair which Mr. Maitland Vincent had been occupying was vacant, and the door of Jasper's office was open.

Jasper sighed.

"Close the door, Miss Dilley," he said gruffly.

It was two o'clock in the afternoon, and Philip Winters had been out of bed for only a few minutes. In that few minutes, he had his shoes and trousers, and enveloped his face in a coat of lather. He was interrupted just four square inches of lather and beard when equipped with a servitor device and the sound effect was that of a war drum summoning the braves to combat.

Philip would have preferred to ignore it, but the volume was too great to be ignored.

He had previously wrapped a towel around his neck. Placing his left arm under the towel, he was able to prevent the lather from dropping on his trousers. In his right hand he held his razor. He walked across the room and opened the door.

Maitland Vincent strode in past him.

"You!" Winters' ejaculation was one of supreme disgust.

"Shut up!" Maitland ordered. "This is no spot for your supposedly facile wit. Brain is needed. I'm in a hole."

"Can't talk," Winters babbled. "Makes lather spatter."

"I don't want you to talk. I want you to listen. Go ahead and shave."

Winters went ahead and shaved, while Maitland talked about his girl, his uncle, and his—if-million.

By the time he had finished his harangue, Winters had completed his hair-removing operations.

"Well," Philip asked, "what are you going to do about it? If I may present an original idea, a million dollars is a lot of money."

"Truth, there," Maitland bellowed. "But alongside of Miss Delma Hughes it becomes the less desirable of the two alternatives."

"Why don't you call her up and talk it over with her? She'd be willing to wait a year; she'd realize what it would mean in the end."

Winters proposed.

"No. That's out," Maitland elucidated. "According to the old fanatic's order, I can't have anything to do with her."

"I'll talk with her," Winters offered brightly.

"How does that improve matters?" Maitland wanted to know, self or through another party. This is what is technically known as a dilemma.

"The problem," Winters declaimed, "seems to be to decide which you want the more, the lady or the million."

"The problem," Maitland corrected him, "seems to be to decide whether I can get the girl and the money, too. I've already decided which of the two I want the more."

"Does the young woman in the case happen to love you?" Winters inquired.

"I have a rather well-founded belief that she does," Maitland informed him.

"There isn't perchance any doubt in your mind about your love for her?" Winters persisted.

"None!" This was another bellow.

"Have you any money?" Winters placidly continued the inquiry.

"Of course. I've got a few thousand," answered Maitland indignantly. "Did you think that I was going to get married on the Morris plan?"

"Just making certain," said Winters. "One must have all the facts."

He lit a cigarette and registered benevolent wisdom.

"Alors," he began, "in your present frame of mind, you have two choices. One is to forget your uncle, his order and his million and marry Delma as you planned. The other is to take yourself off to points distant, come back in a year, garner the boodle, and attempt to set things right with the young woman. Have I been correct as well as clear?"

"Uh-huh," Maitland admitted.

"Alors, again," went on Winters. "You have enough money to take care of you for some time. I have a shack down on the Island. I suggest that you pull the great disappearance act, go down there, shoot ducks, tease fishes, and put in some thinking. I have spoken."

Maitland Vincent was sprawled on the dock. Half of his long body was hanging over the end of it. His bare arms were moving about in the cold water hunting for periwinkles. A periwinkle is a small univalve mollusk, and is also fairly good bait. He found several clinging to the granite foundation. Tearing off a few handfuls, he made a pile of them. He cracked open the little horns and removed the meats.

It was Thursday morning, and Maitland had not yet been there a week. He would have denied that, but, as you would have Mr. Philip Winters, Mr. Jasper Bellew, Miss Delma Hughes and the calendar on your side, his denial would get him nowhere. Maitland was very close to nowhere as it was. His mind was hovering on a cloud of indecision, which was being buffeted about by winds of futile hope and possible regret.

A dory which the Ancient Mariner might have known was tied to the side of the dock. There were three inches of unpasteurized water in it. Winters' shack was a half mile away, and the beach was almost as far. Maitland built up more proof concerning invention's parentage by placing the end of his legs on the thwart in the stern, awkwardly but calmly away. About five hundred yards out, he pulled he dropped his line over the side.

The water wasn't very deep or very active. On the sea bottom a crab was engaged in practicing acrobatics. A lobster approached, noticed the crab, and detoured. The crab, sensing the snub, discontinued his endeavors, and staggered melancholically away.

Suddenly a gleaming object appeared several yards from the bait. As it came nearer, Maitland saw that there were two gleaming objects. He decided that they were cod. Side by side, they cut parallel arcs and angles, along which they traveled. Then they separated. One of them remained a short distance away, while the other circled about the hook and regained the periwinkle. With a movement which indicated long experience he leaped at the hook.

Maitland found himself looking down at a bare hook, and a happy fish devouring a periwinkle. When the fish had dined, it turned around, apparently to join its companion. But the other fish had gone.

Before the restaurant door was opened for him, Maitland could hear the trio roaring out the Anvil Chorus. The Anvil Chorus was not written to be played by trios, nor was it intended that it should be played in restaurants. It was, nevertheless, helpful to Maitland. Its vigorous notes spelled out the word "soup," which was an excellent omen. Maitland did not entrust his coat, hat and scarf to the care of the cloak-room girl. He kept them on. The little dark man behind the large light moustache started to stop him, recognized him, and proceeded to beat what those who concern themselves with such things would call a hasty retreat.

Delma was sitting at her usual table.

Her greeting was so cool that the air threatened to become liquid.

"I know all about it," Maitland said. "I'm no longer one of your acquaintances and all that. Now, listen!"

He spoke slowly. With delicate attention to detail, he told her of the dictum which his uncle had laid down, of his conversation with Philip Winters, and of the week he had spent at Winters' shack.

When all was told, Delma said, in tones which were warmer but by no means passionate, "So?"

"I'm here," Maitland pointed out. "I've disobeyed his old order, and we've lost the million. I'm going back to work tomorrow. Can you get the afternoon off?"

Delma thought that she could.

"Then," said Maitland conclusively, "we'll be married."

"Wait," demanded Delma, "until I finish this soup."

Jasper Bellew was sitting in his swivel chair, gazing at the map on the wall. One of the beneficiaries of a trust fund which the firm handled lived in Calcutta. That fact gave Jasper a feeling of international importance. Jasper's nervousness of a week before had vanished. There was nothing for him to do, and he was quite confident that he was equal to the task.

Miss Dilley opened the door of Jasper's office.

"Mr. Vincent is here," she said.

Her words and the arrival of Mr. Vincent were simultaneous. Nor was he alone. Behind him trailed Miss Delma Hughes and Mr. Philip Winters.

Miss Dilley started to leave.

"Stay here," commanded Maitland. "We're going to need you."

She stayed. It was the first time in years that anyone had needed

"Miss Hughes, Mr. Bellew," said Maitland.

Delma bowed. Jasper spluttered.

"Mr. Bellew, Mr. Winters," said Maitland.

Philip bowed. Jasper continued spluttering.

"Are you a justice of the peace?" inquired Maitland.

"Why—what do you mean?" queried an astounded Jasper.

"The answer is 'yes' or 'no,'" Maitland reprimanded him severely.

Jasper's dignity returned.

"I am," he said.

Maitland handed him the marriage license. "Is this in order?" he asked.

"It seems to be," Jasper conceded.

"O K," said Maitland. "Go ahead."

"Do you realize that you're forfeiting a million dollars?" Jasper shouted. "Why—"

"Go ahead!" interrupted Maitland.

Jasper went ahead. With Philip Winters and Bertha Dilley as witnesses, he performed the ceremony which made Delma Hughes Mrs. Maitland Vincent.

The bridal party was on the point of leaving, when Jasper for the first time assumed control of the situation.

"There is a sealed document which I must read to you," he told Maitland.

"Is it necessary?" the groom asked. "I lose the money and that finishes it."

"It is necessary," Jasper answered firmly.

From the safe he procured a long envelope. He opened it, and, in tones intended to simulate the voice of doom, began to read:

"Be it remembered, that I, Maitland Perrin, of New York City, in the County of Kings, and the State of New York, being of sound mind and memory, but knowing the uncertainty of this life, do make this my last will and testament, hereby revoking all wills and codicils heretofore made by me.

After the payment of my just debts and funeral charges, I bequeath and devise as follows:

All my property without exceptions to my nephew, Maitland Vincent, subject to the restriction explained in the following paragraphs.

I have left a letter for that young man, in which I order him to have nothing to do for the space of one year with his fiancée, Miss Delma Hughes. This letter sets forth that his inheritance of my fortune will depend on his obedience or disobedience of that order.

And so it will.

If he is fool enough to place the money before the woman he loves, my wealth will go to the 'National Association for the Enlightenment of Youth.' If he is intelligent enough to disregard my absurd order, he, Maitland Vincent, will inherit all.

In testimony thereof—"

Jasper read no further. He had fainted.

In a twenty-ten taxi, going up-town, Mrs. Maitland Vincent turned to her husband.

"Tell me, fellow," she requested, "how did you happen to come back from Philip's shack when you did?"

Maitland looked at her. "It was all on account of the two fishes," he said tenderly.

"Say more," insisted Delma.

"I had a periwinkle on the end of my hook; a nice, and—to a fish—a desirable periwinkle. Two fishes came along. They were obviously mates. The male left the female and went after the periwinkle. He took it right off my hook. But when he got it, his mate had gone. A lump climbed up Maitland's throat. 'I saw us like that. That's what I was doing. Like the fish, I was leaving my mate to go after a periwinkle. And I realized that when I got it, you might be gone.'"

Neither said anything for a while.

"Maitland," inquired Delma, "in that college, where you played football, basketball, and baseball, did you have studies, too?"

"Sure," said her husband.

"Was biology one of them?" Delma asked.

"No. It was an elective," Maitland told her. "I took physics instead."

"Thank God!" said Delma reverently.

El Salvador To Be Recognized

President Roosevelt Will Extend Recognition To All Of South America

WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—Marking establishment of friendly relations with all the nations of South and Central America, President Roosevelt will shortly extend American recognition to the Central American Republic of El Salvador. This move has been decided upon as another gesture of this country's desire to adhere to the policy of the "good neighbor" in its relations with the nations south of the Rio Grande.

Checkweighmen Must Get Permit

All Coal Dealers Urged To Get Licensed Man To Weigh Coal On Scales

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—Issuance of licenses for public checkweighmen under the Baldi act passed by the recent special session of the legislature passed the 1200 mark today.

Pointing out that the department is geared to issue licenses the same day applications are received, Secretary of Internal Affairs Philip H. Dewey urged all dealers of coal or other solid fuel to obtain licensed weighman "as quickly as possible."

The act already is effective, making it illegal to deliver coal without a weighman's slip showing the type of fuel and actual weight of every order, but enforcement has been delayed to give weighmen a reasonable time to apply for licenses.

FATAL APPENDICITIS GREATLY REDUCED

(International News Service)

LONDON, Jan. 26.—Only 3,000 out of 50,000 cases of appendicitis are fatal in England every year.

Thirty-five years ago very few people had heard the word "appendicitis." Medical men attribute its increase to the stress and worry of modern life.

Appendicitis was a little known complaint in England until 1902, when King Edward VII. of England fell victim to it and underwent an operation.

'Pigs' Author to Wed

Anne Ronell

Wedding bells are being tuned up in Hollywood for Miss Anne Ronell, above, well-known song writer, and Lester Cowan, former president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. Although the couple will neither confirm or deny the reported marriage plans, close friends insist that the altar march will start soon. Miss Ronell has written numerous popular songs, including the much-hummed "Three Little Pigs."

MANY EXECUTIONS OF DOGS AND HOGS

(International News Service)

BUCHAREST.—Four million dogs and 300,000 hogs, condemned to death by government order are now being executed wholesale in Rumania.

A poor corn crop is the reason. Since Rumanian peasants feed their dogs and pigs mainly on corn porridge and since that same commodity is also the staple food of the peasants themselves (85 per cent of the population), the authorities decided to save their human rather than animal subjects.

The average Rumanian dog, according to statistics of the agricultural ministry consumes three pounds of corn a day. As there are some 8,000,000 dogs in the country that means 24,000,000 pounds of corn that might well go for human subsistence.

Major Melvin Is Named President

Pennsylvania Federation Of Historical Societies Elect Officers

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—Major Frank L. Melvin of Philadelphia, today was the new president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Historical Societies, succeeding A. Boyd Hamilton, of Harrisburg, who had served two terms.

Other officers elected were: Ralph Beaver Strassberger, Norristown, first vice president; Robert M. Ewing, Pittsburgh, second vice president; Judge Henry C. Niles, York, third vice president; J. H. Brougher of the state department of Public Instruction, secretary.

The organization recognized old newspaper files as invaluable sources of historical information and called on the state library to complete its new files.

The Pennsylvania Society for Archeology, meeting in conjunction with the federation sessions, elected Miss Frances Dorrance, Wilkes-Barre, president. Others named were: Ross Pier Wright, Erie, first vice president; former governor John S. Fisher, Indiana, second vice president; Ellsworth Cowles, Tioga Point museum, Athens, secretary; D. J. Eckman, Lancaster, treasurer.

"Quite a few" is colloquial for "a good many" or "a considerable number."

Scotch Whisky Goes On Market

Four Thousand Cases Of Scotch Whisky Reach Philadelphia For State Stores

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—Scotch whisky will be more than just a commodity listed on the price sheets at the state liquor stores within a few days, the liquor control board said today.

Four thousand cases of Scotch whiskeys have arrived at the Philadelphia warehouse this week and are being distributed throughout the state as fast as possible. Another 15,000 cases of various foreign brands of liquor are in transit to the warehouses.

The board also announced the inauguration of an automatic inventory system which will be in operation within a few days and which, it is hoped, will prevent shortages.

Swelled by increasing amounts of revenue, the state stores fund passed the first million-dollar mark. Transmittal of $165,652 increased the total to $1,138,231. Issuance of 13 retail liquor licenses to restaurants boosted the license fund which is to be distributed to municipalities on February 1 to $1,629,246.

If the government would keep public confidence, let it prove that it can lick racketeers.

New Castle Boy Flees Hospital At Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 26.—Clad in a bath robe and a pair of slippers, a boy patient fled from St. Francis hospital Thursday but was found 20 minutes later, a half mile from the institution.

Clarence Beemus, 18, of New Castle, an inmate at the Pennsylvania training school, Morgantown, had been in the hospital for almost two weeks with pneumonia. While his nurse was absent, he donned a bath robe and slippers and walked out a side door.

Police were notified and Radio Patrolmen James Fitzhugh and Roland Bond found Beemus in Penn ave nue near Winebiddle avenue. He was taken back to the hospital.

STUDENTS ABANDON COONSKIN COATS

(International News Service)

AMES, Ia., Jan. 26.—"Joe College" is gradually abandoning the mode of going bare-headed in flashy suits and coonskin coats at Iowa State college.

A questionnaire of Ames merchants revealed this trend. Forty per cent of the fraternity men at the college now wear hats to classes and 70 per cent don hats for dates, the figures showed.

Merchants are selling nearly three times as many conservative type suits this year as last, and the "collegiate" fur coat sales are lessening, they reported.

ardo Machado

NEW GOVERNMENT IS HARD AT WORK

(International News Service)
HAVANA, Jan. 26.—Death sentences for 48 members of the late regime of Gerardo Machado, reported to include former Secretary of the Interior Octavio Zubizarreta, were to be asked at today's meeting of the court of sessions.

Meanwhile the new Mendieta government proceeded with its work of reconstruction, tackling the problem of the seized properties of the American-owned Cuban Electric Company along with many matters pertaining to the sugar industry.

Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative in Cuba, in a formal statement declared that a revival in the sugar industry would extend its benefits throughout the island, touching all other phases of business.

Cabinet To Resign

(International News Service)
PARIS, Jan. 26.—The short-lived Chautemps government is expected to resign tonight due to the public indignation over the $40,000,000 Stavisky scandal.

Public resentment has been increasing and notwithstanding Chautemps' promises to investigate thoroughly, the failure of the Bayonne Municipal Pawnshop scandal, Royalist and Communist riots, have become a disturbing menace to the present parliamentary situation.

HARDWARE REMOVED FROM PUP'S STOMACH

(International News Service)
BOSTON, Jan. 26.—They called 15m Mike, this three months' old Irish terrier.

He certainly got himself into a peck of trouble, but he still lives to bark about it, thanks to the skill of doctors at the Argell Memorial hospital, particularly Dr. Lawrence Blakely, who performed an amazing operation on the little "Mutt."

From Mike's stomach, they removed a piece of zinc, a piece of wire two inches long and twenty two nails, ranging from half-inch carpet tacks to two-inch shingle nails.

USE CWA WORKERS

(International News Service)
BERKELEY, Calif. Unemployed hunters may find relief under the CWA, if Poundmaster Pete Rogers decides to declare war on feline "public enemies" who are allegedly destroying wild bird life in the Berkeley foothills.

Mayor Edward N. Ament, acting on complaints from bird lovers, instructed Rogers to launch a drive against stray cats, employing CWA workers to track them down.

RANCHERS GET GOOD PRICES FOR ALFALFA

(International News Service)
MALTA, Mont.—Alfalfa seed netted ranchers along the Missouri river bottoms near here, soon to be flooded by the waters of the Fort Peck dam, a considerable profit during the past season. A local plant cleaned 140,000 pounds of the seed this year. Abe Biddison produced 20,000 pounds of Blue Tag Grimm seed on his ranch, and Frank Hedges 7,000 pounds of Ladak, for which he received 55 cents a pound.

WOOLING AND MARRIAGE NEW COLLEGE COURSE

(International News Service)

DEFTANCE, O., Jan. 26.—No longer are the light subjects of sex education and the problems of marital life being discussed behind closed doors and in separate groups of men and women.

At least, not at Deftance College here, as a special course in courtship and marriage has been introduced into the college curriculum.

Rev. Neal L. Newlin, pastor of the First Congregational Church at Hamilton, O., who has gained national fame for his outspoken remarks about sex education, is conducting the course, which has attracted a fairly large number of men and women students.

TOT SHAMES THIEVES

AWAY FROM HER DAD

BOSTON, Mass.—Three bandits entered the store of John Zocchi of Roxbury, took $6 from the cash register, and were preparing to search for more cash, when his three year old daughter Anna, clad in a nightgown and rubbing her eyes, toddled out to see what the noise was all about.

With sleepy eyes, she looked at the bandits and smiled, and then reached her hand out and placed it in her father's. Apparently ashamed, the bandit leader whispered, "Come on, let's get out of here," and the trio fled.

ISLAND PRISONERS

PROVE AVID STUDENTS

(International News Service)
PORTLAND, Ore.—McNeil Island federal penitentiary surrounded by the cold waters of Puget Sound boasts what is probably the most studious class of prisoners in the United States. Seventy of its inmates are voluntarily enrolled for educational work, according to a report of Attorney General Homer Cummings.

In addition to class study work, McNeil Island shows a per capita circulation of six library books a month, with half of the volumes non-fiction, the report says.

LIFE IS SAVED

BY HUMAN WALL

SAN ANDREAS, Cal., Jan. 26.—Falling 100 feet to the bottom of an excavation on the Carson Hill mine near here, Herman Cordes, 30, owes his life to the heroism of fellow miners. A dozen miners formed a human wall at the top of the pit to hold back a truckload of earth that was about to be dumped in it. The avalanche would have buried Cordes alive.

RIDES TRAIN AND SECURES ADOPTION

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 26.—To a little white ptarmigan, Engineer Richard Smith who pilots a train between Dauphin Manitoba and Hudson Bay Junction, Sask., is something of a Santa Claus.

During a recent run of his train Engineer Smith saw the ptarmigan fly to the running board of the locomotive a short distance out of Sega. Smith, noticing it was beginning to suffer from the intense cold, lifted it into the cab. When the train reached Dauphin the bird made no effort to leave the cab and the engineer took it home with him where it is now living in contentment.

DOG BREAKS WINDOW TO SAVE THREE LIVES

SEATTLE, Wash.—Brownie, pet dog of Morris Benatar, was acclaimed a hero for his aid in rescuing a youth and two four-year old boys from the burning Benatar home.

Brownie hurried himself through the glass of a basement window and by frantic barking awakened Gus Freed, city fireman, who lives next door. Freed broke down the door of the Benatar home, found Meyer Levinson, 17, asleep in a front room and learned the youth's nephew, Joey Allen Benatar, and a little friend, Kenneth Griffin, were sleeping in a rear bedroom.

Attack On Gold Program Gains

Republicans In Senate Voice Opposition To Roosevelt Plan

DEMOCRATS WAIT FOR BALLOTING TIME

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The Republican attack on President Roosevelt's new gold monetary program gained in volume in the senate today as it swerved from constitutional questions to a defense of the "man in the street" from devaluation of the gold dollar.

The Republicans apparently were seeking to make a campaign issue of the president's request for power to nationalize gold and create a $2,000,000,000 fund for stabilizing international exchange. Republican leaders already have condemned the stabilization fund as a "gambling venture" of staggering proportions, certain to lead to tremendous losses to the government and huge profits for private speculators.

Administration Leaders Silent.
Administration leaders sat silent under most of the attack, relying upon their ability to muster enough votes in the senate to eliminate all unfavorable amendments and enact the bill as desired by the president.

Senator Robinson (D) of Arkansas, majority leader, forced the senate to meet at 11 a. m., an hour earlier than usual, and announced he would hold a Saturday session unless the bill is passed by nightfall.

A major silver war was threatened by a bloc of western progressives from both parties, led by Senator Wheeler (D) of Montana, and Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, the silverites will propose authorizing the president to purchase 1,000,000,000 ounces of silver and then issue silver certificates (paper money) against the silver bullion. They expect to be defeated but they intend to wage a lively debate.

Jibes From Democrats.
The Republican strategy of defending the "man in the street" against the gold devaluation program, drew jibes from the Democrats. The president's spokesmen declared it was the first time conservative Republicans have bothered about the "little fellow."

The Republicans nevertheless predicted dire results on people with fixed incomes. They charged the devaluation program would slash the purchasing power of millions, without giving material benefit to anybody except the confirmed debtor. They predicted salaried employees and persons living on fixed incomes—as insurance or revenue from small estates—would suffer drastic hardships.

Senator Reed (R) of Pennsylvania was slated for a speech on how the program would affect the salaried employees. He privately condemned the bill as authorizing government speculation and a further reduction of income to the employed classes.

Americanism: Urging the young to develop high ideals and escape this money-madness; snubbing the poor and lifting your hat to a rich speculator.

35,000 LIVES LOST IN 1933 AUTO DEATHS

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Automobile accidents throughout the United States rolled up a huge toll in loss of life, injuries, and damages in 1933, the National Safety Council recently announced.

There were 35,000 persons killed; more than 1,000,000 were injured; 85,000 were permanently injured, and the economic loss from damages was in excess of $1,000,000,000, the report said.

Deaths from automobile accidents showed a three and one-half percent increase over 1932.

Added Up—Perfection Plus!

Those perfect girls who grace the ads—who are they and how do they get that beautiful way? The secret is, they usually are composites. Here are three models selected by artists: (left to right) Sabyna Donnelly, for head and hands; Jane Baker, for ankles, and Estelle Martin, for figure. Add them up, say the artists, and you have "perfection plus." (Central Press)

RUMANIAN WOMEN DEFY "IRON GUARD"

(International News Service)
KLAUSENBURG, Rumania, Jan. 26.—Members of the "Iron Guard" recently broke the windows of beauty parlor shouting "Enemies of our morals, perish! Woman's place is in the kitchen! Rumanians, awake!"

The "Iron Guard" is an extreme anti-Semitic and nationalist organization, recently dissolved by the Rumania government. According to newspaper comments the attacks on the beauty parlors proved very unpopular with the female population. Some of the youths throwing bricks at the windows were severely beaten by employees and customers of the beauty parlor before they were arrested.

HERE'S CHEAP PLAN FOR RADIO CARS

(International News Service)
ARLINGTON, Mass., Jan. 26.—For a few dollars capital and a 50-cent tool kit filled with batteries and tubes, Patrolman Adalbert Zwink constructed a radio set permitting two-way communication between a police squad car and the short-wave police station here. Police officials were so enthusiastic over the set they plan to have similar sets manufactured and equip all police cars.

SAILOR SCORNS OLD TIME SUPERSTITIONS

(International News Service)
HALIFAX, N. S., Jan. 26.—The modern sailor has few superstitions, according to steamship skippers plying between here and the West Indies. In square riggers a sailor or always wore a charm against evil fate on the watch against evil omens. The drowning of the ship's cat foretold catastrophe and if the captain stumbled on the gangplank, squalls would beset the voyage. But all that is gone, say the skippers of today. Sailors will set sail on Friday or any other day and, in general, send most of their money home to one woman who is known as "the missus."

LOYAL DOG KEPT POLICE FROM MISTRESS

(International News Service)
DENVER, Jan. 26.—Pat was a faithful police dog, but he didn't understand what all the excitement was about. He only knew that his mistress, Mrs. Jay, was in trouble. Mrs. Jay had fainted. Neighbors attempted to go to her aid. Pat kept them away. The police ambulance was called. Even the blue uniforms failed to impress Pat.

It was not until Patrolman Jack Hargrave brought Mrs. Jay's daughter, Frances, near, to the scene that Mrs. Jay could be given first aid. "Let them take mama," Frances told Pat.

Pat wagged his tail and retired.

FIREMAN ON HOLIDAY SET 14 FALSE ALARMS

ATLANTA, Ga., Jan. 26.—A postman took a walk on his holiday. But city fireman Fred Leister went the postman one better. Leister, celebrating the New Year holiday, not only went to the fire but provided so many fire calls that he kept his fellow firemen racing back and forth through the city seeking fires that weren't there.

Leister was docketed in city court charged with turning in 14 false alarms New Year's eve. The alarms, pounding in at three and five minute intervals, kept four fire companies speeding through the streets seeking phantom blazes.

CWA Course In First Aid Will End Friday Eve

Examinations Tomorrow Evening Will Conclude Week's Instruction

CWA workers from various sections of the city and county are making preparations for the examinations which will be held on Friday evening in the City Council Chambers, concluding a week's intensive study of the Red Cross First Aid Course.

Dr. Lumen Popp was the instructor last evening, and after his lecture, a group of squad leaders under Ralph F. Davis, Chairman of the Red Cross First Aid Committee, demonstrated the things which were brought out in the lecture. Dr. E. F. Henderson will be the instructor this evening, concluding the lessons, after which the examinations will be given tomorrow.

The course has been under the supervision of the Lawrence County Chapter, American Red Cross and instruction has been given in their standard first aid course, covering various kinds of accidents and emergencies.

BEING MULKED(International News Service)
NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—With support of state and federal government agencies pledged to him, Commissioner of Correction A. H. Mc-Cormick turned today to the job of making a model prison of Welfare Island, the city penitentiary.A raid on the prison, led by Mc-Cormick which disclosed shocking evidence of dope traffic, corruption and racketeer domination of inmates was promptly followed by an offer from U. S. Attorney Martin Cunio to investigate the narcotic traffic at the prison and the declaration from District Attorney W. C.
Dodge that he would prosecute vigorously any prison official found criminally negligent.Chief interest of McCormick today, he said, was getting "a new deal" for some 1,400 inmates of the prison who had been mulked of prison favors and privileges by Joe Rao and Fiddle Cleary, "Big Shot" inmates and a group of henchmen who are alleged to have dominated affairs of the prison.Alexander To Buy Carload Of CementD. O. Davies, safety director, during council session at city hall Friday, submitted a motion granting authority to Purchasing Agent J. D.
Alexander to buy one carload of cement, the price to not exceed $500.
The cement will be used for CWA projects and the money will come out of the $17,000 allotted by the city for the payment of materials and tools for the CWA.BOYS' CLUB BETTER THAN POLICE CLUB(International News Service)
DENVER, Jan. 26.—"A boys' club is more effective than a police club," Major George W. Braden of Pasadena, Calif., told members of the Denver police department in a recent lecture here. He pointed out instances where organization of play activities had put an end to gangs.
"Boys would rather settle their disputes through organized baseball contests than through gang fights," he said.Major Braden told of a youngster who had been taken before a judge for petty offenses a number of times. "I don't get into mischief," he quoted the boy as saying. "I just can't keep busy, and the mischief gets into me."CHURCH COTTON CROP INCREASED INCOMECAMARGO, Okla., Jan. 26.—When the Methodist church budget failed to provide enough funds, Rev.
Claude Rhodes asked his charges to plant some of their land in "church cotton."Thirteen acres were planted and Rhodes and his family worked a five acre plot from the total planting while members of his congregation tilled the other eight acres.
When sold, the cotton increased Rhodes' salary $150 and doubled the sum the church had been giving to benevolences.One reason nobody understands money is because it's so darned changeable.

Mayor McNair Has Ideas On Cooking(International News Service)
PITTSBURGH—Mayor William N. McNair is a "collectivist" in any argument over the preparation of Schnitz and Knepp, the Mennonite dumpling dish being popularized under his administration.This was revealed recently when Pittsburgh's "cut-up" chief executive walked out on a Schnitz and Knepp banquet specially prepared for him by a group of well-meaning ladies.It wasn't temper, or the environment, or the quality of the tempting dish. It was just a matter of principle. "The mayor was firm."
"The Schnitz and Knepp and ham should be cooked all together," Mc-Nair explained. "I was in the kitchen and noticed a slice of ham on the plate. That's not Schnitz and Knepp; the ham should be cooked in it. So I left."BIG BAD WOLF BLUFF;

Nobody really should be, according to the National Geographic So-posium upon this animal.Feeling, perhaps, the character of the American wolf has been il-labeled and cast into disrepute by a popular song, the society avers the wolf seldom molests man."The real, not the metaphorical, wolf has never been as great a menace to man in North America as is generally supposed," declares the society in defense of the beast."The general use of firearms among the pioneers early taught the wolf to keep his distance."We have suffered lightly, if we

PICK-A-BACK FASHION(International News Service)
ST. LOUIS, Mo., Jan. 26.—Among strange friends can be added the attachment at the Zoo here of a baby crested curassow and an ordinary domestic hen.The reason is strange, too, but understandable. Knowing that a curassow, a black bird glossed with purple does not usually care for its eggs, Zoo officials put several un-der a domestic hen. Much to their surprise, one of the eggs hatched.
The antics of the youngster have almost driven the hen frantic, but it's a common sight at the Zoo to see the little bird, which will someday attain the size of a small turkey, ride about on the back of its foster mother.2-OUNCES LIQUOR

Predicts Autos, New Year, Will Go Up In Price

Manufacturers Got Break This Year From Distressed Steel Manufacturers

PRODUCTION COSTS WILL BE INCREASED

(International News Service) WASHINGTON, Jan. 26.—The NRA sees a substantial increase in the prices of automobiles next year. It attributed the low cost of current models to a "break" the manufacturers received from the steel plants last year.

Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the NRA, Thursday said before the steel code became effective the steel companies unloaded great quantities of their products to the automobile manufacturers at "starvation prices."

Cheap Production. "They cut prices sharply and did everything to make a sale," he said. "This gave the automobile people a break to produce cars more cheaply than they ever can produce again. The same is true with the automobile accessories industry."

Concerning the basing points provided in the steel code, Richberg believes the operation of this clause "needs investigation" and invited complaints. He said the regulation on basing points was inserted in the code for a 90-day trial at his suggestion. So far the complaints received have been negligible.

"We haven't approved a single action of the board by directors under the code," he continued, "but have reserved our decisions on certain practices which are being done under this code."

AROUND CITY HALL

When the civil works administration's program is completed in Lawrence county the tools which were bought with city money will be returned to the city. There are pickers, shovels, wheelbarrows and what not. An employee of the CWA maintains a check on the tools and according to City Director of Streets and Improvements B. F. Butler he will assign a city employee to keep a check on the tools after they are returned to the city.

Punctuality apparently is the watchword in city hall. But of all the officials Mayor Wayne spends more time there than any other official. He arrives daily at 9 a. m. and can generally be found in his office at any hour of the day. At night he visits the office of the chief of police and if there are any prisoners in condition to face trial he conducts midnight court.

Apparently that "One For All and All For One" slogan of the city detective bureau is in operation. Willis McMullen is rated as an excellent finger print expert and police photographer but he is not keeping what information he possesses from other men in the detective bureau. Rather he is instructing them and daily some of the detectives are instructed in the art of finger-printing.

After the January books are closed Director of Parks J. D. Alexander and other city officials will know how much money has been expended for tools and materials for CWA projects. Each month, Director of Finance A. A. Hoyland presents to colleagues a report of expenditures and balances. Last December council voted $1,000 for tools and materials. Before a single tool or amount of material can be purchased must pass through the office of Alexander, who is the city purchasing agent.

To secure a contract for 2,000 feet of fire hose nowadays is considered quite an order, according to information furnished D. O. Davies, director of public safety. Last Monday approximately a dozen fire hose salesmen were in council chambers when the bids were read. Some of them came from Chicago and others from Philadelphia. "Why come that distance to sell 2,000 feet of fire hose?" Davies asked one. "Two thousand feet is a big contract nowadays," one replied.

Although Chauncey Davis had enough work last summer to keep him comfortably busy, there has not been a depression in his line during the past month. Chauncey wears a sanitary policeman's badge and during the last 25 days there have been approximately 65 contagious cases reported. He has had to place quarantine signs on homes where patients recovered. In addition he collects milk samples from trucks, acts as a food inspector and investigates sanitary nuisances. There formerly was attached to the health office a city nurse and another sanitary policeman. Since the death of the late Louis Moon the work has been carried on by Davis.

Police chronology for 24 hours ending 3:30 p. m. January 25, six arrests, on charges as follows: violation of traffic ordinance, four; drunkenness, 2.

HENS ON STRIKE

AT POULTRY SHOW

(International News Service) BOSTON—Hens at the Boston Poultry Show went on a "laying" strike, as only a very small quantity of eggs were collected for distribution to the hospitals. The previous year as many as 200 to 300 eggs a day were gathered from the 3,000 hens. This year hardly enough eggs were collected to make the collection worth while.

NEW CASTLE LADY SUFFERED FROM STOMACH TROUBLES

Tells How She Tried New Medicine Vendol And How She Got Prompt Relief. Never Suffers Anymore From Gas, Sourness Or Pain. Constipation Also Was Greatly Relieved.

MRS. ELLA LIVERMORE Praises New Medicine Vendol

"I do believe that I hardly miss an hour during the day telling someone about the benefit the new medicine Vendol has given me. I have just fixed me up fine and I am glad to praise it," stated Mrs. Ella Livermore of 630 1/2 South Mill Street, New Castle, Pa., to the Vendol Man in the New Castle Drug Company. "At the time I first heard about the new medicine Vendol, I was suffering from an upset stomach and had been taking different remedies for it but had received no benefit; so I was glad to give this new medicine a trial and it has certainly proven successful.

"Everything I ate seemed to disagree with me, and this food fermenting in my stomach filled me with gas; at times the pains felt like a sharp knife cutting. "I think my liver was out of order, and my mouth seemed dry all the time which kept me drinking a lot of water. I often felt dizzy, little spots danced before my vision, my tongue was coated, and every morning upon awaking I had a bad taste in my mouth. I didn't know what it was to be free of constipation for a day.

"It was about two weeks ago that I began taking Vendol and the little Vendol laxative tablets; I have never had any medicine to do me as much good as they have. It seemed like they were prepared especially for my troubles. In a few days my bowels were moving nicely, and I am now entirely free of the dizziness; my tongue has lost that furry coat and I no longer have the desire to constantly drink water.

"I find that since my digestion has been improved and I am no longer annoyed with the gas, I sleep much better. This has made me feel better in every way.

"My appetite is so much better that the folks jokingly say I may have to hunt another boarding house. It is wonderful to be free of the gas pains, dry mouth and dizzy spells. I give all the credit to Vendol, and hope that by reporting my experience, others suffering as I did will be induced to try this fine new medicine."

Come to the New Castle Drug Company, 31 East Washington St., and ask for me, the Vendol Man, and I will tell you all about this splendid new medicine, and explain how it will help you. Vendol is sold at the 21 North Mill St. store also.

Questions Of Day Presented Clearly In Library Books

Modern Collection Of Books On Finance, Industry, At Local Library

"Today we are in a period of great social and economic change" says John Dewey, a modern philosopher. "There is grave danger that no plans or bad ones will rule the day unless an enlightened public opinion is developed on finance, money, industry and trade. Adult education in these things is not a luxury much less a fad. It is a necessity of democracy if it is to win the battle in which it is now engaged."

To aid in the development of an enlightened public opinion, the New Castle public library suggests the following books. If the book is not in when you want it, ask to have it reserved. Bring your borrowers card.

State School Group Backs Resolutions

Taxation, Salary Cut And Alcohol Education Get P. S. E. A. Notice

The 1933 convention of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, meeting at Philadelphia last month, adopted resolutions favoring a graduated income tax as a means of relieving the tax burden now borne by real estate; such resolutions in other governmental services, including the executive, judicial and legislative, that are commensurate with those which the educational group has sustained; and specific information concerning the effects of alcohol and narcotic upon the human body, and urging them to emphasize the importance of leisure time.

Dr. C. C. Green, city school superintendent, reported when the executive committee of the New Castle branch of the P. S. E. A. met to hear delegates' reports. Dr. Green served on the resolutions committee.

DOG'S CAMOUFLAGE CAME FROM COAL PILE

(International News Service)

DENVER, Jan. 26.—Denver's greatest dog hunt ended with the revelation that a bit of intelligent camouflage had been used by the missing pet. Chin, a black chow, escaped from a train here while being shipped to Laramie, Wyo. Railroad employees, Denver police and numerous volunteers joined in the search. The railroad yards were combed repeatedly for a week.

Kenneth H. Sanford, Laramie newspaperman and owner of the missing dog, came to Denver to aid in the search. He found Chin hiding on a pile of coal, the blackness of which matched his own color making him almost invisible to searchers.

Swick Protests Against 'Rubber Stamp' Congress

By ARTHUR C. WIMER
Special Washington Correspondent,
New Castle News

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 26.—Representative J. Howard Swick was roundly applauded in the House of Representatives this week when he challenged the right of the President to issue mandates to legislators and protested on Congress becoming a "rubber stamp."

Congressman Swick had taken the floor to object to the practice of the Administration of operating under two budgets—one covering emergency expenditures and one covering ordinary funds. He said such a practice was "ridiculous and misleading."

"I do not believe it a good practice or fair to continue the policy of hoodwinking the taxpayers of the United States by attempting to show a balanced budget through the means of a complicated accounting system," Dr. Swick told the House. "We all know that the national debt is increasing by leaps and bounds and will continue to do so for many months to come, as has been indicated by the President—when he so frankly informed Congress that we shall have a seven billion dollar deficit at the close of the fiscal year."

"Why not face the facts and present them honestly, without subterfuge?" demanded Dr. Swick. Mr. Swick praised President Roosevelt for "the tireless manner in which the President has labored unceasingly since his inauguration to bring about national recovery." At the same time, the Congressman denied the right of any individual citizen to make Congress into a rubber stamp.

"Like the majority of men in the House, I am past the half century mark in life," declared Swick. "I have been blessed with a mother and father who were typical of the sort of God-fearing people who make up the backbone of this great nation. No man is infallible, that word can only be used in conjunction with the name of the Great Architect of the Universe."

"It is an insult to the intelligence of every member of this House to say that we must accept the mandates of any individual citizen, regardless of his position, be it high or low, without the right of comment or criticism."

"I have pledged allegiance to the Constitution of the United States and shall do what I believe is right for my country, regardless of the demands of any individual, party, or group of individuals. When the time comes that Congress adopts the policy of being a rubber stamp, then representative government ceases to exist in these United States."

Congressman Swick was loudly applauded on both sides of the political aisle.

Will Ship Trees Early In April

Will Be Supplied Only For Timber And Watershed Purposes

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—Trees ordered from the Department of Forests and Waters for reforestation in Pennsylvania during the coming spring season will be shipped in early April, Charles R. Meek, director of the bureau of forest extension, announced today.

There has been no increase in the cost of these State-grown trees and last year's prices are being charged; $2.00 per thousand for seedlings and $5.00 per thousand for transplants. The minimum order accepted is for 1000 trees.

The following kinds of seedlings are offered for sale as long as the supply lasts: Norway spruce, three years old; red pine, three years; pitch pine, two years; Japanese larch, 2 years; and red oak, one year. The only transplants available are four-year-old Norway spruces.

Meek has asked prospective tree planters not to apply for trees for planting in nurseries or for ornamental use, in as much as they will be supplied only for timber production and watershed protection. However, applicants may send in their orders to the Department of Forests and Waters, Harrisburg, at any time, since it is not necessary to inclose money with the orders. Shipments will be made C. O. D.

Wider Scope Of School Training Employs Teachers

Expect 1600 To Get Jobs Under New Program

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—Originally planned to give work to 800 unemployed teachers, Pennsylvania's Emergency Education Program is being extended to provide jobs for twice that number. Dr. James N. Rule, superintendent of public instruction, has asked county chairmen of Emergency Education committees to submit to the Department for approval plans for increasing the work in all counties. For this purpose and other emergency education activities an allotment of $169,000 a month has been made to Pennsylvania by the FEPA.

During December it is estimated that more than 25,000 people were attending emergency education classes in Pennsylvania. It is now possible to extend this service to approximately twice that number.

In addition to the activities provided for in the original plans submitted to the Federal Relief Administration approval has been secured for the establishment of emergency nursery schools. These centers, intended to give nursery school service to the children of unemployed and needy persons, will have a program of child care, child guidance, health care, child feeding and parental education. Each center will be staffed by trained teachers, nurses and parental education workers.

ANCIENT CHATEAU DESTROYED BY FIRE

(International News Service)
BAYEUX, Jan. 26.—One of France's oldest and most historic chateaux has been completely gutted by fire and many irreplaceable antiques lost. Dating from the sixteenth century, the Chateau de Mesnils near here, is now nothing but a hollow shell with smoke-blackened walls.

Only a few of the many priceless treasures in old tapestries and seventeenth and eighteenth century furniture were saved from the flames. Firemen, rushed out from Bayeux, were forced to stand aside and watch the chateau burn when they ran out of water. They broke the ice on a small pond but only used their hoses for fifteen minutes before the pond dried up.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 26.—Representative J. Howard Swick today expressed opposition to abandonment of the civil works program at this time.

Congressman Swick said he did not think it would be right to dismiss in mid-winter the jobless who had been taken care of through the civil works plan. He urged extension of the civil works aid until the return of warm weather at least.

Public Hearings Will Be Held To Fix Milk Prices

State Milk Control Board Will Hold Hearings At Strategic Points

(International News Service)

HARRISBURG, Jan. 26.—Public hearings to fix prices for milk in Pennsylvania will be started in the near future by the newly-created three-man milk control board. Chairman Edward A. Stanford said today.

"The hearings will be held at strategic points throughout the state," Stanford said. "to make it possible for everybody to be heard." Continuing the rapid pace started with its organization yesterday, the board resumed executive session today to complete a program for quick action to license all dairy producers and establish milk prices in the state under the provisions of the Buckman Act.

Dates and sites for the hearings was a principal subject under discussion at today's meeting now that a schedule for issuing licenses has been decided upon.

No reply has been received by the board to its telegram to Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York City asking him to postpone his embargo on Pennsylvania milk until the board had an opportunity to confer with him. The board is ready to meet the New York executive as soon as he replies to the message.

"Brass Tacks" On The Sunday School Lesson

The Golden Text

Matthew 5:8—"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

(The international uniform lesson for Jan. 28 on the above topic is Matthew, chapter 5, especially verses 1-12, 43-48, the Golden Text being verse 8, "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.")

The one incomparable sermon of the ages is our Lord's "Sermon on the Mount." It contains the most revolutionary philosophy, the noblest ethics and the purest and loftiest standards of life ever uttered in all the world's history.

This perfect sermon follows the scriptural order of perfection symbolized in the number seven, in that it is really seven sermons upon seven texts setting forth seven fundamental principles of the kingdom of heaven with Christ as King is commending to the world. It is the King's platform or, speaking in 1934 terminology, "the Code of the Kingdom," embodying (1) the nature of his kingdom, 5:1-12; (2) the kingdom's purpose, 5:13-16; (3) the kingdom's policy, 5:17-48; (4) the kingdom's spirit, 6:1-18; (5) the kingdom's wages, 6:19-34; (6) the kingdom's atmosphere, 7:1-12, and (7) the kingdom's goal, 7:13-27.

The Nature of the Kingdom

The first thing to be understood about the kingdom Jesus was commending to the world is as to its nature, viz. it is a spiritual kingdom and not a political or material kingdom like the kingdoms of this world. "Blessed are the poor in spirit, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven". Thus the foundation of the kingdom is laid deep in bedrock of poverty of spirit, lowliness, humility so beautifully embodied in the King himself who is "meek and lowly in heart", or in the publican he commends whose prayer was "God be merciful to me, a sinner".

Out of this fundamental necessity of the kingdom will flow quite naturally right attitudes toward God and man. Poverty of spirit will beget the religious attitude of sorrow for this poverty—"Blessed are they that mourn"; then it will beget the social attitude of meekness towards others who are also "poor in spirit". It will beget the religious attitude of hunger and thirst after righteousness; then follows the social attitude of meekness, "Blessed are the merciful"; then the religious aspiration of "the pure in heart, for they shall see God"; then will be manifested the social attitude of the "peacemakers who are called the sons of God". Thus this kingdom so purely spiritual in its nature, bears its fruit for God in right religious attitudes and for humanity in right social attitudes. If the kingdom is within us it must manifest itself along these lines.

The Purpose of the Kingdom
The purpose of his kingdom was not to dominate the world by force but to save it from its own inherent corruption: "Ye are the salt of the earth". That purpose was also to lighten the world and dispel its inherent darkness: "Ye are the light of the world". So by forces unseen and seen the kingdom in men's lives would transform the world.

The Policy of the Kingdom
The policy of the kingdom towards the best in religion that preceded it was to be not one of nullification but of fulfillment: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill". This principle the king then applies to the laws on murder, adultery, honesty and retaliation for wrongs, and shows how the kingdom demands perfection as applied to inner thoughts and motives as well as to overt acts of sin, and makes the fundamental law the law of love in which all other laws are submerged and fulfilled.

SNAKES HAPPY IN APARTMENT HOUSE

(International News Service)

LAGUNA BEACH, Calif.—After building an apartment house for 28 rattlesnakes and seven gopher snakes, A. Pierce Artran and Carlyle M. Perkins, who collect reptiles in Arizona and Mexico put in tiny pains of glass through which they might study their winter habits.

The house is a large drygoods box covered with a tar paper. There are two floors with a ramp leading to the second story.

The snakes seem to like their new apartment house and most of them prefer the upper bedrooms. In this mild climate reptiles do not become completely lethargic in winter but come out to sun themselves on warm days.

Q. When I get bloated with gas, have indigestion, feel nervous, sleepless, isn't there some way I can get relief?

A.—Eat carefully, drink hot water one-half hour before your breakfast. Avoid greasy foods and take a tonic and blood purifier, such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, easily obtained at any drug store. Try this for about thirty days and see if it does not help. Also eat plenty of fresh vegetables and drink milk.

GLITTERING SEQUINS ON FISH NET

Glittering sequins adorn this fish-net evening wrap in which Ann Dvorak looks so alluring. It's not much on warmth, but boy, is it becoming! And speaking of sheer materials—net frocks are very smart for the spring season.

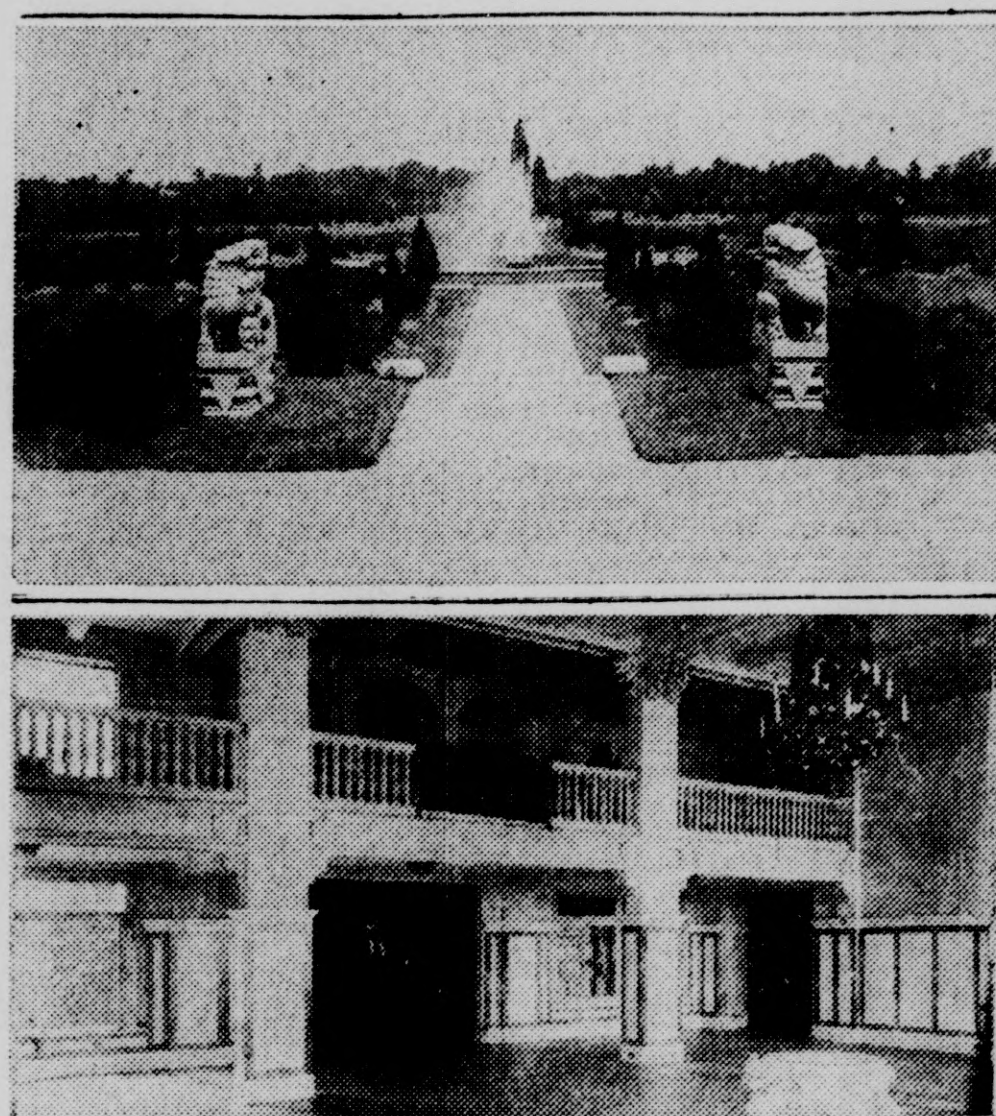

Insull Faces Extradition as Long Fight Ends

Ending his long fight to escape extradition to Illinois where he is wanted to stand trial on indictments charging him with embezzlement and larceny, Samuel Insull, Sr., former Chicago utilities magnate, has been ordered to leave Greece before Jan. 31 by Premier Panyoti Tsaldaris, who has asserted that under no conditions would the fugitive be permitted to remain in the country any longer. Fleeing from Chicago in the wake of the collapse of his giant utilities enterprises, Insull was indicted while in Paris, and sped to Italy and finally to Greece to avoid extradition.

Constantly guarded, Miss Duke remains indoors, even foregoing her favorite sport of horseback riding. (Central Press)

Barney and Billy Get Ready for Battle

Barney Ross gets some ring tools. Snapped as he selected a pair of mitts for use in a sparring match is Barney Ross, lightweight champion, who battles Billy Petrolle, the old "Fargo Express", in a charity bout in the Bronx coliseum, New York, Wednesday, Jan. 24. Billy Petrolle gets some advice. "Here's what you do," says Billy Roche, veteran fight impresario, and Billy Petrolle, resting as he trains for the Ross bout, turns an attentive ear. But Petrolle really does not need advice, he's one of the smartest boxers doing business today.

"Happy Birthday, Mr. President"

THESE CHILD PATIENTS AT WARM SPRINGS CAN HARDLY WAIT FOR JAN. 30. Virtually every community in the nation is giving a gala Birthday Ball next Tuesday evening to honor the President and to create an endowment fund for the national work of Warm Springs Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, but nowhere in the land will there be a happier Presidential Birthday Party than at Warm Springs. There Mr. Roosevelt is more than the President of the United States; he is the philanthropist and friend whose efforts have done so much to provide proper treatment for victims of childhood's most dreaded disease, and he is the President of Warm Springs Foundation, the only personal or outside interest retained by him when he entered the White House. So, knowing Mr. Roosevelt and his interest in their welfare these child patients mean it when they say, "Happy Birthday, Mr. President."

NOT IN LOVE, BUT LOOKA HERE!

Not real, but reel, is this intimate photo of Rudy Vallee, radio crooner and orchestra leader, and Alice Faye, singer in Rudy's band, snapped during the making of a movie in which they both appear. Although Miss Faye has been named in a suit for separate maintenance filed by Fay Webb Vallee, wife of the crooner, in Los Angeles, she insists there is nothing between them.

TOPCOATS AND SUITS ARE IMPORTANT FOR SPRING

SIMPLICITY GIVES ELEGANCE TO FORMAL FROCKS

Long, simple lines, and restrained trimming details give elegance to these frocks for formal wear. Pat Wing, left, is a vision in a simple white crepe frock which comes to the throat in the front and has a slight graceful train. Kathleen Burke, center, wears a hostess gown also of white crepe, with large sleeved jacket of black crepe. Right, Kay Francis models a flesh gown with silver bugles.

Scout Council's Annual Banquet Held At Church

L. B. Round Renamed As County President; Elect Other Leaders

SEYMOUR ADDRESS FEATURES EVENING

Approximately 60 men sat down to the annual dinner meeting of the Lawrence county council, Boy Scouts of America, held in the First Methodist church, last night, with the ladies of the church serving a delicious meal.

Council President Louis B. Round was the presiding officer and he did a fine job, keeping things moving along so that the company was able to adjourn at a reasonable hour. The business usual to annual meetings was speedily dispatched, the election of officers resulting in the following scouts being inducted into office for 1934:

Council President: Louis B. Round; first vice president, Dr. G. S. Bennett; second vice president, Judd C. Turner; third vice president, B. K. Thacker; Ellwood district chairman, Judd C. Turner; first vice chairman, F. E. Moore; second vice chairman, Paul Cartwright; council commissioner, Ralph F. Davis; scout treasurer, Frank F. Fischer; scout executive, H. G. Horton; field commissioner, Dr. J. A. Gillespie; Ellwood district commissioner, Ralph Main; assistant district commissioners, Harry Culliford, Elmer Tinsman, Elden Danner, Walter C. DeArment, Dr. T. J. McPate, A. S. Hainsworth and Sidney L. Smith.

Diners Introduced
Sidney Smith introduced the scoutmasters and assistants present and the troop committees were then introduced; after which objectives for 1934 were then taken up and adopted. Mr. Round made a strong plea for attendance of scouts at the annual meeting of the national council at Buffalo, N. Y., and the annual meeting of Region Three in Washington, Pa., in October, stating that meeting high-caliber men at these gatherings was always an inspiration for better work. He then introduced R. F. Seymour regional director of scouting in Region Three.

Mr. Seymour started by recalling the early days of council organization in the county, when Fred Rentz, Mr. Round, Mr. Fischer and other like-minded men got together and set in motion the forces which resulted in the organization we now have. He praised this work and told his hearers of the speeches Mr. Round had made at Washington, at the annual regional meeting there. He contrasted the youth of a generation ago with the boys and girls of today in regard to their pleasures and their home life; and reminded his hearers that the scout movement is now able to offer an activity program starting with the boy of nine and carrying through to voting manhood. He drew four vivid pictures of Scout teaching which had come from his own personal observation in the region; and said that these could be duplicated in many places. He told of the ten year program and made a stirring appeal to the men to take their places in this work for boys.

His address was well received and many men thanked him for it at the close. Rev. D. L. Ferguson of the Highland U. P. church delivered the closing prayer, Rev. Stump of St. Paul's Lutheran having given the invocation.

The board held a short session after the meeting was dismissed, after which Mr. Seymour left for Philadelphia. He made several calls on old friends yesterday, meeting Mr. Rentz, Mr. Bolen, Davis and others.

Youthful Picket Mysteriously Shot

Youth Shot While Standing On Front Porch Of Home In South Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

(International News Service)
WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Jan. 26.—A youthful picket, was found mysteriously shot with a steel jacketed bullet from a high-powered gun early today on the porch of a home near the South Wilkes-Barre mine of the Glen Alden Coal Company which has remained in operation despite the strike called by the United Anthracite miners of Pennsylvania. The victim was Peter Dobransky, 16, of Ashley who police believe was on special picket duty at the South Wilkes-Barre mine. He was rushed to the Mercy hospital. The bullet tore through the right side of the youth's chest. Police here do not use steel-jacketed bullets which inflict more serious wounds than ordinary types of slugs. Further disturbances throughout the region were expected as Sheriff Luther Kniffen, of Luzerne county and his deputies prepared to round up and arrest all persons accused of violating court injunctions against picketing.

Living Pictures Given At School

Large Crowd Witnesses Presentation At Rose Avenue School Last Night

Rose avenue school auditorium was packed to the doors Friday night, with scores standing in the hallways, when the students of the school presented a group of 18 living pictures. Old masterpieces that have been only painted images looking out from a canvas world were transformed to the stage of the school, and through the artistry of the teachers in garbing and posing the youngsters, the illusions were splendidly done.

Each living picture was backed by a chorus of youngsters, with the grade 1 band coming closing to taking the honors.

Following the living pictures the crowd looked at copies of masterpieces which had been loaned to the school for the occasion. These were hung in four rooms of the school.

BRUTAL KILLERS OF SON NOW FEIGN INSANITY

(International News Service)

DENVER, Colo.—Donald K. Smith, Littleton, Colo., being held in the Denver County jail pending his trial on charges of brutally kicking his three year old son, Donald A. Smith to death, sings weirdly, twists his clothes in disarray and generally conducts himself in a manner designed to show an unbalanced mind.

"But," said Charles Thompson, deputy warden, "we are not being misled. Smith's little insanity play is always terminated when we threaten to put him in solitary confinement. He doesn't risk discomfort. When guards tell him to behave himself, he snaps right out of it and conducts himself like other prisoners."

Smith is accused of killing his little boy because the latter could not say the word "breakfast."

RATS STOLE PEANUTS

THEN SALTED THEM

(International News Service)

NELSON, B. C.—Nelson rats, whose diet has been the subject of controversy, like their peanuts, but prefer them salted.

This was determined on inspection of a wholesale warehouse here where a stock of unsalted peanuts was stored.

The rats had bored into the sack of peanuts and carried their plunder to another part of the warehouse where bags of salt were stored.

Where a pile of empty shells testified that the rodents had cracked the nuts and seasoned to taste with salt gnawed from the salt bags.

WOMAN SURVIVES

BULLET IN BRAIN

(International News Service)

UTICA, N. Y.—Miss Anna Mullen, 28, who was shot through the brain here recently when Paul Ganin mistook her car for his and thought she was stealing it, is continuing to improve after doctors thought she would die.

Continued blood transfusions did the trick. Local physicians class it as one of the most remarkable cases on record locally. She lost her speech and could not move her right side. She is now walking and talking.

for southern Pennsylvania are February 1 to 15 for early cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce, kohlrabi, onions, and beets; February 10 to 15 for celery; March 1 to 10 for tomatoes, peppers, and eggplants; and April 1 to 10 for squashes, cucumbers, and melons. For northern Pennsylvania the dates for the four groups are respectively: February 15 to March 1, March 1 to 10, March 10 to 20, and May 1 to 10. For seed sowing in the hoed beds the dates are three weeks later than in the greenhouse.

GOOD OATS VARIETIES YIELD BEST IN TRIALS.

Oats variety demonstrations conducted by agricultural extension workers in the state during the past four years have proved the superiority of good varieties over the kind the farmers had been growing.

Average yields obtained are as follows: Cornelian 51.5 bushels, Patterson 49.4, Keystone 49.9, Victory 48.3, Swedish Select 45, and the farmer's own oats 41.2.

In tests at State College over a 5-year period Keystone averaged 46 bushels, Cornelian 43.9, Patterson 41.9, and Victory 40.3.

Many thousands of acres of the three highest yielding varieties were grown in Pennsylvania last year. However, these oats were grown primarily for feed and by spring may be all consumed. Growers of this county who have good clean crops, to relieve the acute seed situation, should make their oats available for seed purposes.

TREAT MARES RIGHT TO GET LIVE COLTS.

It is estimated that only about 60 per cent of the mares bred each year produce living foals. A large part of this loss can be prevented by proper feed, care, and management of the brood mare.

Idleness, the vane of horse breeding, should be avoided. Working mares are more certain to produce good foals than idle ones, but judgment must be used in working them. Too heavy pulling, over-exertion, and backing heavy loads must be avoided.

When not working, the mare is best cared for by having the run of

For Hard Coughs Or Colds That Worry You

Creomulsion is made to give supreme help for coughs or colds. It combines seven helps in one—the best helps known to science. It is for quick relief, for safety.

But careful people, more and more, use it for every cough that starts. No one knows where a cough may lead. No one can tell which factor will do most. That depends on the type of cold.

Creomulsion costs a little more than lesser helps. But it means the utmost help. And it costs you nothing if it fails to bring the quick relief you seek. Your druggist guarantees it. Use it for safety's sake. (adv.)

a pasture. As foaling time approaches it is best to lighten the work, but many cases are on record where mares are worked up to the day of foaling with no ill effects.

The feeding of a working brood mare is easier than that of an idle one. A well-balanced ration is essential, using good feeds containing plenty of protein, lime, and phosphorus. An abundance of such feed is especially needed by both immature bred mares and bred mares which are suckling foals, as there is in addition to the demand of the developing fetus, the needs of the mother in the one case and for milk secretion in the other. Feeds should be free from dust, mold, or decay which might cause abortion.

Active bowel condition can be maintained by the proper use of wheat bran, oil meal, or good pasture.

CATALOGS GIVE HELPFUL INFORMATION ON GARDENS.

During the winter months many firms distribute catalogs and garden literature. The information given in many of these periodicals consists principally of specific cultural directions for the plants and seeds which are listed. The catalogs from firms located in the immediate community should be studied first of all as they undoubtedly will recommend plant materials which are best suited for that particular vicinity.

Catalogs of today, in general, briefly describe the plant, pointing out the color of the flowers, season of bloom, color of fruits, cultural directions, and the value of the plants in home grown improvement. Much of this information is based on years of wide experience.

Many catalogs devote pages to suggestions for flower border and shrub border plantings in addition to specific information concerning types of plant materials which will combine readily in foundation planting.

The many pictures which are generally included in the catalogs or periodicals assist the amateur to recall plant materials by name. Local libraries which have a garden section are only too glad to set aside much literature for the perusal of the amateur plant lover.

Garden club members can exchange catalogs, periodicals, and books with each other. In this way an individual can obtain the information which is desired. Some garden clubs appoint committees to obtain information relative to the latest information which is disseminated by permanent horticulturists and landscape architects. Do not delay the study of these books, catalogs, and periodicals, as there is a possibility that the supply of plants one may desire will be exhausted when orders are placed. Plan and study now for later planting.

Pain is no longer pain when it is past.—Margaret J. Preston.

Fifty Firemen Have Close Call On Blazing Boat

Big Yacht Keels Over With Firemen Aboard During Height Of Blaze

(International News Service)
PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 26.—Nearly 50 firemen escaped possible drowning in the Delaware river today when the burning decommissioned naval yacht Niagara listed sharply and fell over on her side.

The firefighters had boarded the flame-ridden vessel when suddenly she keeled over. The men clung to parts of the superstructure as steel cables were attached to the ship from the wharf. When the cables lifted the bow and partially righted the ship the firemen rushed off the blazing deck and boarded a large hulk to which the Niagara was moored.

After a battle lasting hours hope of preventing the ship from foundering was abandoned. The vessel, which was given to the government during the war by Helen Gould, New York heiress, was burned to the water-line.

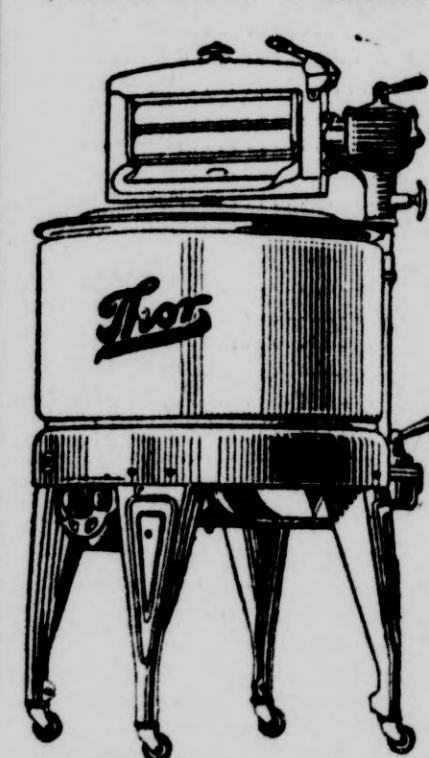

The Niagara, a sister ship of the former Presidential yacht Mayflower, was awaiting dismantling.

FARMERS IN MIDWEST FIND LABOR SHORTAGE

(International News Service)
DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 26.—Midwestern farmers are somewhat concerned because they say, the occasional handy-man they were won't "pick-up" for a few days' work has almost disappeared as a result of the governments re-employment campaign.

Some farmers also reported losing their "regular hands" who succumbed to the lure of higher pay to work on public projects. The result has been a stiffening up of the rate of pay for farm hands which last year was from $1 to $2 per day.

The prediction is made by some large farm operators that extra help during the harvest season this year will cost as much as $5 per day if the government keeps up its public works program.

AUTO ACCESSORY SHARES FEATURE

(International News Service)
NEW YORK, Jan. 26.—The stock market resumed its advance in fast trading today with gains in the main body of issues running from fractions to two points.

Leaders in the rebound include the farm shares, auto accessory and tobacco stocks, although the rest of the list was in demand at higher prices.

Case gave a demonstration of its old-time volatility by spurring more than two points on a large turnover.

This brought sympathetic buying into International Harvester, Deere and Minneapolis Moline.

American Tobacco B was the leader of the upturn in the heretofore sluggish tobacco shares, with a gain of more than a point.

R. J. Reynolds and Liggett & Myers scored small gains.

The auto accessory shares sprang into the limelight today under the lead of Electric Auto Lite which went to a new high for the year.

Rail shares were in comparative neglect with New York Central, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Southern Railway and Pennsylvania scoring only small gains.

Consolidated Gas and other utility shares were strong but trading in this division was light and gains comparatively small. The liquors, specialties, and gold mining stocks were quiet and steady.
